Fills in with more info

Dear Editor:

After finishing the article on the Jack London Softball team's win over the Carmel Police Department I felt it only fitting to fill in a few items not mentioned.

There was no mention of Matt Campanero's masterful double that irrevocably turned the tide and spirit of the game.

The Carmel Cupid arrived to target and shoot down the police pitcher who, begin immediately smitten, threw his arms around one of his teammates, (a meter maid).

The Carmel Cupid arrived to target and shoot down the police pitcher who, begin immediately smitten, threw his arms around one of his teammates, (a meter maid).

There wasn't even a hint about the on-the-field post-game donations awarded by local businesses, nor the post-game celebration at Jack London's where memorable Kamikazi libations were rampant and Banzai cheers could be heard all the way to Marie Hooks' victory party at her home.

Humans in danger, too!

Dear Editor:

I must take exception to a statement made by a local leader. He said to put down the fish over humans. Doesn't he understand the ethics of our environment? We have a moral obligation to keep nature in balance. It is absolutely critical that we recognize this fact — and NOW! We can't continue to put down our wildlife.

We, too, are in possible danger of becoming extinct, and it'll come all too fast if we continue to eradicate our wildlife.

Supports Ed Lee

Dear Editor:

I spent five years on the Zone 11 Flood District committee, from 1972 to 1976, studying the water supply problem. After hearing many, many experts and exploring all possible ideas, we arrived at the conclusion that the most feasible answer was to build the smallest possible dam at the San Clemente site.

We were told, however, that we couldn't get the support of the public for a dam until we had all the costs worked out. Nothing has changed in all this time! I don't believe any study will tell you how much a dam is going to cost, since it can change daily. I can tell you it would have cost less in 1976 than it will today!

During that five years, I watched as, each time, someone dropped out of the committee and was replaced by someone new, we would spend the next month or so answering all their questions. We had to show that we had considered and already rejected as impractical all their "new" ideas. It really helped when a new member was familiar with what had been done previously.

With an election on the water board coming up, I can't begin to tell you how important it is to have someone on that board like Ed Lee who is both familiar with the problems and familiar with the reams of study material already done.

Ed Lee is the only member who has had the patience and fortitude to stay on the Zone 11 committee since its very beginning and to continue on the Water Management Board. Believe me, it's a treadmill that can be very frustrating!

We need continuity, we need Ed Lee!

Red Cross wants publicity

Dear Editor:

I feel sure the Red Cross Bloodmobile last week would have attracted more blood donors if the Pine Cone had printed our publicity. Your help is important. Good newspaper coverage reaches more prospective blood donors and our community needs more blood. There is only one source — we, the people, must give it.

Suppose, just for a moment, that your wife needed surgery that required blood transfusions. Suppose there was none available for her!

Fortunately this won't happen because of the efforts of volunteers who work long and hard to attract blood donors to both our Red Cross/Community Hospital Blood Bank and our Bloodmobiles. I say "ours" because it is "our" responsibility to supply the blood needed in "our" community by "our" families, friends and neighbors.

Fortunately, also, there are many faithful donors who take this responsibility seriously. One of these, Lou Allaire, last week received an award for having given nine gallons of his blood! This represents 72 separate donations!

Please don't wait until a problem touches you personally before giving your support to the blood program. The need is great and constant.

Report from Sacramento

New agency cuts down on bureaucratic red tape

By SAM FARR, Assemblyman, 28th A.D.

IN NEWSPAPER columns, speeches and informal chats, I am frequently found probing the sources of, and possible solutions for, various problems — many of which are caused by bureaucratic regulators and the red tape they strew in their paths.

Now I want to tell you about an unusual government agency that turns the tables on the whole regulating process — an agency of last year the new Office of Administrative Law to clean up some of the regulatory mess that state agencies had made in nearly 30,000 pages of regulations.

AB 1111 states: "The Legislature therefore declares that it is in the public interest to establish an Office of Administrative Law which shall be charged with the orderly review of adopted regulations. It is the intent of the Legislature that the purpose of such review shall be to reduce the number of administrative regulations and to improve the quality of those regulations which are adopted."

The creation of the OAL drew some fire. "Hoo boy, another agency, another boondoggle," some said. "Good idea but it'll never work," others said, while still others likened it to "letting the fox guard the henhouse."

But the OAL has proved a dramatic success, producing a 51 percent decline in the growth of new regulations in the first 12 months of operation. (Four hundred and fifty sets of regulations — varying in length from one to as many as 300 separate regulations each — were added to the Administrative Code in those first 12 months, as compared to 923 sets in the preceding 12 months.)

The decline in emergency regulations was an even more dramatic 64 percent, with 41 sets disapproved for not meeting appropriate criteria.

HOW DOES the OAL evaluate and then approve or disapprove of a new regulation? This "watchdog" agency uses the following five measures:

- Necessity — Has the agency documented the need for the regulation?
- Authority — Is the agency authorized to issue the regulation?
- Consistency — Is it consistent with existing law and other regulations?
- Clarity — Is it clearly written so that persons affected by it can easily understand it?
- Reference — Is there an accurate reference to a specific statute or court deci-

The other side of the Grapestake Fence Finds behavior of councilmen 'bizarre, beyond comprehension'

By GWEN

Well folks, the clowns are running the circus again. The bizarre and fanciful behavior of two members of your city council is almost beyond comprehension.

Their actions and words at the last council meeting regarding the granting of a use permit for yet another restaurant in Carmel defies description. (All of this in spite of a moratorium that they had endorsed with great alacrity and enthusiasm at the time!)

We learned that the people applying for the use permit are "good friends" of one of the councilmen; we also learned that one of the waitresses in their present restaurant is a relative of another councilman.

Then in the Pine Cone of Oct. 15, 1981 we read Mr. Lloyd's statement: "It's a real opportunity to have a quality restaurant in Carmel. If we're going to have all these people here, we have to feed them."

Ohmigosh! With over 70 restaurants in our little square mile village, do we need another to feed the masses?

And Mr. Brunn, who is so found of saying, "let the city staff handle it," has now done a complete about face. The couple did go to city staff and the matter was handled competently and fairly by both the Planning and Building Departments. But, because the outcome was not to Mr. Brunn's liking, he is crying "foul."

Incidentally the Planning Commission was unanimous in their decision to reject the issue of this use permit.

The Mayor's Report

Some people draw conclusions without really knowing the facts

By BARNEY LAIOLO

IT'S STRANGE how people come to some conclusions without really knowing the facts. I refer particularly to an article in the Monterey Herald on Wednesday, the 14th. The caption of the article reads, "No Need For New City Hall, Carmel Committeemen Say."

The first paragraph says "The Carmel City Hall, small and cramped as it is now, is preferable to a new one of concrete and steel, which was recommended in the 1973 General Plan."

Let's put things into perspective . . . I don't know anywhere in the past discussions that a structure of "concrete and steel" was considered.

The third paragraph read: "It's quaint and it's lovely . . . it's Carmel . . . I don't care if it is crowded," said Eugene Hammond, an alternate member of the committee. "A steel and concrete structure on top of Public Works would be a disaster."

In answer to Mr. Hammond's remarks, I agree it's quaint and lovely, but there comes a very serious point of practicality. The present City Hall has served the city well, considering the fact that it was converted from an old church. At the time of conversion it housed four employees. At present there are 11 employees.

Originally, it had a total of four desks, three typewriters and approximately eight four-drawer files. Due to the changes which have taken place in the last 10 years, what with all the required reports, studies and paper work that have been added by either state or federal requirements, it has become necessary to add seven more typewriters, a computer, a stamp machine, two copiers, approximately 30 more filing cabinets, etc., etc.

These additions are "the tools of the trade." Anyone in business knows the best results are gained when the tools and working conditions are good. In plain and simple language, we have just outgrown the facility.

Committee member John Etherton agreed: "I don't want a City Hall in my town that looks like one in Seaside . . . this is not Seaside."

Nowhere can I find that it was the plan to have our City Hall look like anyone else's.

Creative planning and the proper use of materials — for example wood — could provide a very attractive and workable facility with enough space to carry on the necessary business of a city for many years.

I did not mention the loss of productive work time and the expense of operating vehicles that are required on the part of staff members who must necessarily make several trips daily to City Hall to get the job done for the Police Department, Forestry Department and Street Department. It's no wonder the remark often is made: "Why does it take so long to get something done?"

ON SUNDAY, it was my pleasure to attend the official dedication of the new terrace at Sunset Cultural Center. It has been a long time since the original plan was presented. In this pleasant setting there will be many happy moments for all to enjoy even if it's just to sit and relax. Many, many thanks to all who were involved in this fine addition!

The Second Annual Fireman's Muster, which ushered in "Fire Prevention Week," was very successful. Thanks to all who contributed their efforts to make this a happy occasion.

The "Bucket Brigade" and the hose cart races, as usual, contributed much excitement to the day's events. Thanks to all the participants and the loyal observers who attended this great gathering.

The radio-controlled miniature fire engine operated by members of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Fire Department and which led the parade from Junipero down to Sunset Center was indeed a great innovation. It proudly displayed the flag of our country. Kudos to all of Carmel's finest firefighters!

Smilin' Barney, Mayor

Where are Carmel, Big Sur LCP's?

LIKE POLITICAL will-o'-the-wisps, the Carmel area and Big Sur Local Coastal Programs seem to have vanished from sight.

The documents which will guide coastal land use decisions from Pescadero Point to the San Luis Obispo County line are very much alive, although less visible to the public.

The Carmel area LCP was denied certification by the Coastal Commission Sept. 3, and coastal staff was directed to negotiate with Monterey County officials on compromises to meet state requirements.

Originally scheduled to be reconsidered by the commission this month, the Carmel area LCP has now been scheduled to come before the Coastal Commission during its Nov. 3-5 meeting in San Francisco.

The Big Sur LCP, certified conditionally by the Coastal Commission last month, has been the subject of discussions and meetings between Monterey County Fifth District Supervisor William Peters, Coastal Commission staff, and county planning staff.

In all of these negotiations, no direct public involvement has been evident. And that has made some people anxious.

One of those who is anxious about what might happen to the Big Sur LCP is Roger Newell, chairman of the 18-member Citizens Advisory Committee which provided citizen participation in the development of the LCP.

The Citizens Advisory Committee recently directed a letter to the Coastal Commission and to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors demanding an end to "closed door" negotiations over the Big Sur LCP.

"We feel you are in error to leave the local perspective out of the discussions at this critical LCP juncture," the committee stated in its letter. "To do so is to shunt many years of objective work in favor of non-resident viewpoints."

"To ignore the local recommendations for satisfying the Coastal Act is to deprive the process of a legitimate local balancing factor and to put into jeopardy the validity of forthcoming LCP products."

Lee Otter, coastal planner, said only one meeting has been held between coastal staff and county representatives on the Big Sur LCP. He said a letter has been sent to the Citizens Advisory Committee to the effect that public participation is still open.

"We're trying to see what sort of conditions will comply with the Coastal Act and satisfy local needs," Otter said. "By law the LCP would have to go back to the county before any action is taken."

But Newell and the Citizens Advisory Committee fear that the essence of the Big Sur LCP will be changed in a ping-pong match between the state and the county.

"There is nobody who represents the local point of view, when it's just the county and the state involved," Newell said. "They are coming to substantive decisions without any local involvement."

"THIS IS A rather important stage," Newell said. "The Citizens Advisory Committee produced a recommendation that reflected a mandate of the community."

Some of the specific concerns of the Citizens Advisory Committee relate to intensity of public access to the coast and the intensity of future visitor-serving facilities, Newell explained.

"The problem is that people are not really sure what's happening now," he said. "Supervisor Peters and Supervisor Moore were assigned to meet with the Coastal Commission, but we don't know where things are."

Newell said he understood that Supervisor Peters had exercised "a very strong hand" at meetings on the Big Sur LCP, and added:

"His point of view needs to be balanced with the views of the local people."

"The Citizens Advisory Committee hasn't been kept up-to-date, and the county itself hasn't been kept abreast of the meetings. It's difficult to estimate the importance of those meetings."

Even if there is an opportunity for more public involvement later in the revision process, Newell is concerned that by then, "there will be no time to develop your arguments at that point."

Crucial to the Citizens Advisory Committee is the preservation of what Newell called the "low key nature of the community."

That means, he explained, not allowing development of several, large visitor-serving units in Big Sur — a recurrent nightmare among most of the members of the Citizens Advisory Committee.

"The state sees public access in a different way than we do," Newell said. "So does the county. We say, what's wrong with the mom and pop stores we've had all along? The state would like to have some large visitor accommodations here, but that's not what the LCP talks about."

"There is a basic feeling among the committee that we won't be represented at the county or state level."

Negotiations are still underway between Supervisor Peters, on behalf of Monterey County, and Coastal Commission staff for revision of the Carmel area LCP, said Susan Hilinski, Monterey County coastal planner.

Thrust of the revisions is toward a loosening of the restrictions against new subdivisions south of the Carmel River and to allow some development on the eastern Odello Ranch, she indicated. None of those changes has been put in the form of a Coastal Commission recommendation, however.

"It's pretty much up in the air," she said. "The ball is in the Coastal Commission's court at this point. If they don't have some recommendations by this week, it means the Carmel area LCP won't be heard by the commission until December."

Fateful school board meeting Tuesday

By ROBERT MISKIMON

DO THE educational advantages of the Carmel Middle School outweigh the costs of keeping it open?

The answer to that question may prove crucial as the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education grapples with a decision on school facilities use Tuesday, Oct. 27.

The board will stick to its original deadline for a decision of the use of elementary school facilities for the 1982-83 school year on Oct. 27, and is also scheduled to decide on future elementary and secondary grade patterns and use of school facilities.

The decisions on use of secondary school facilities and overall grade patterns, however, probably won't be put into effect next fall.

The district is faced with a decline in enrollment coupled with reduced revenues, and several months of committee studies and board meetings have preceded next Tuesday's meeting.

Different and evidently contradictory viewpoints on whether to close the high school or middle school have emerged from committees formed by the board to provide it with information:

- A citizens' advisory committee recommended last June, after a series of public meetings, that the district close either the high school or the middle school — preferably the middle school. It also recommended that one or two elementary schools be closed.

- A district teacher-administrator committee report submitted to the Board of Education last week strongly supported the present middle school program and urged continuation of a similar program separate from both the elementary and high school grades.

- An architect's survey of the cost of renovation of the high school to accommodate additional students — if the middle school is closed — estimated $2.2 million. Cost of renovation of the middle school to accommodate additional students was estimated between $4.7 million and $5 million.

Wild card in the game is a suggestion from some members of the School Organization Analysis Committee that the board also consider a K-4-4 grade pattern.

Trustees agreed to consider an abbreviated report on that option before they make any decision next week.

Middle School teacher Clyde Klaumann told the board that many teachers favored that grade arrangement, and said the district had had such a pattern years ago.

The K-4-4 pattern would include the Kindergarten through fourth grade at the elementary level; the fifth through eighth grade at the middle school level; and the ninth through 12th grade at the high school.

THE COMMITTEE which endorsed the continuation of a middle school program was composed of nine teachers and six administrators.

Factors considered in evaluation of various grade patterns included learning environment, school environment, location, instructional staff, teacher specialization, scope of program, and instructional support programs.

"Basic academic achievement can be excellent in any grade pattern that fits the situation," the committee found.

"The strongest single conclusion made by this committee was that the middle grade students need a program that is different in academic and social emphasis from both the elementary school and the high school. This program which is appropriate to these middle years is best developed with some degree of separation from elementary school and high school."

While the committee supported continuation of the current middle school program, it left the door open to locate a separated middle school program at another facility.

"The committee feels that the needs of the students in the middle years are more similar to the secondary students than the elementary students," the report indicated. "The only way that the committee could see all 7-12 students on a single site was if there were carefully designed, separate facilities with separate programs and schedules."

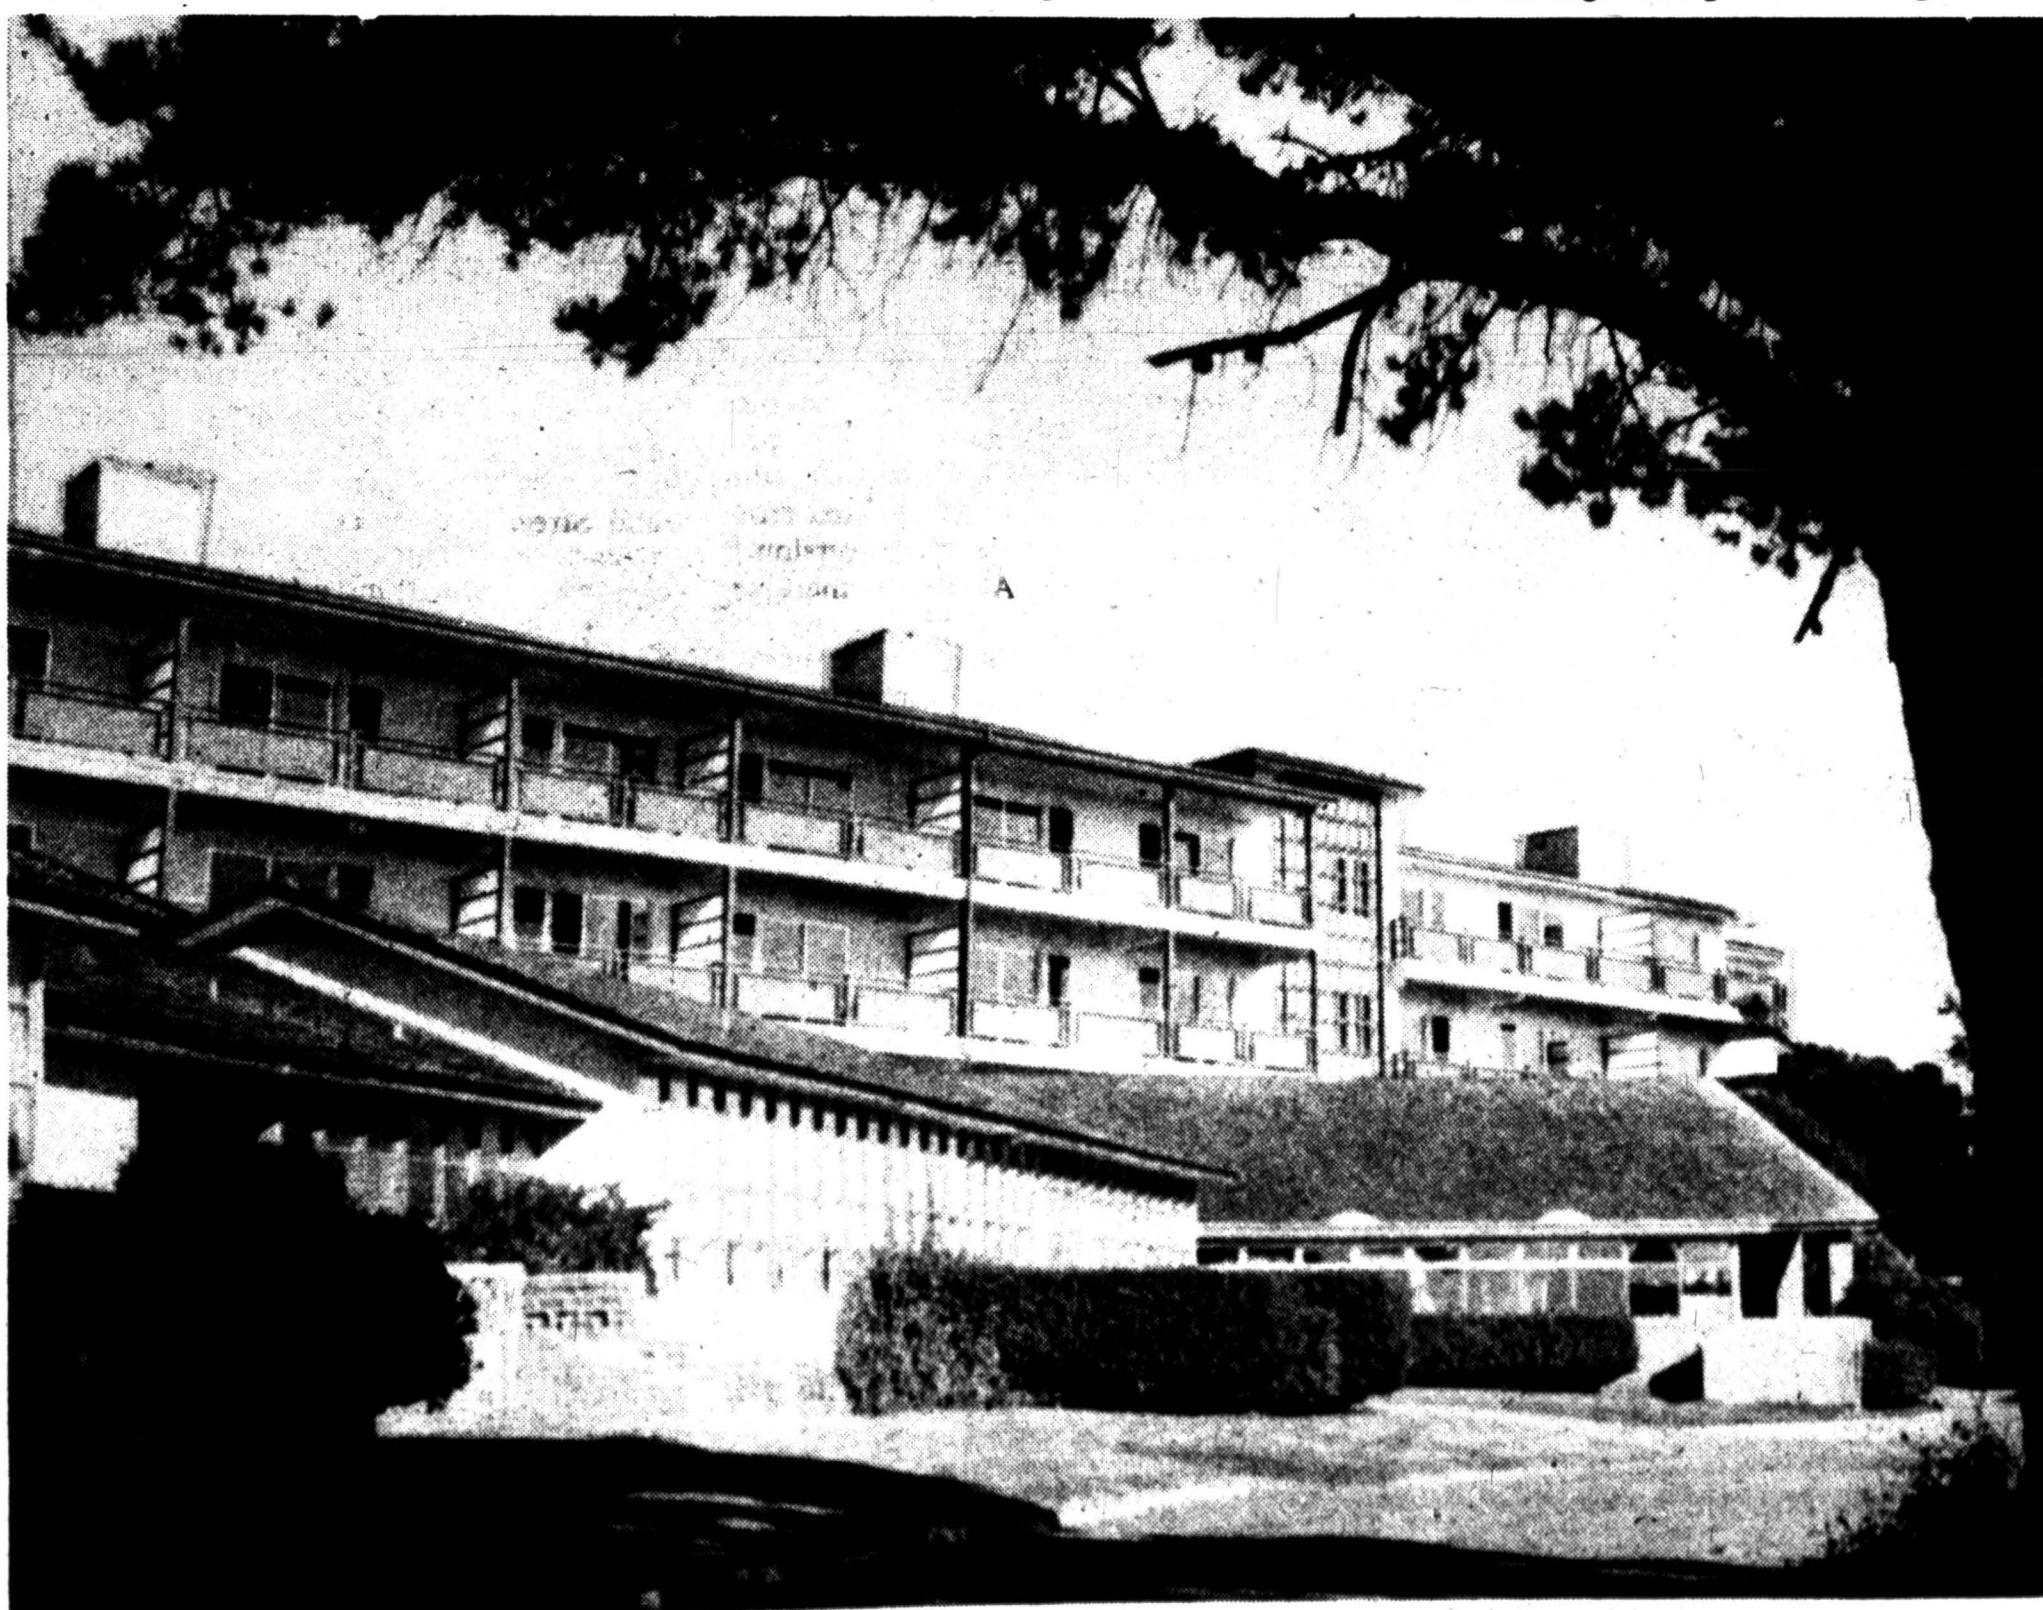

Frank Lynch, chairman of the committee, told the Board of Education last week: "The committee had a great deal of problems dealing with the fact that seventh graders might be in with 11th and 12th graders."

The citizens' advisory committee which studied and reported to the board last June on facilities use also endorsed the idea of a clear separation of middle year students by "special attention to 7-8 grade students to ensure a supportive program for this vulnerable age group, keeping them away from pressures that can occur from mixing with more mature students."

At the same time, the citizens' committee found "a surprising lack of constituency for the middle school, as compared with the loyal support for the high school."

The board grilled members of a subcom-

CVPOA board hopefuls tell views

CARMEL VALLEY Property Owners Association members will have a broad choice of viewpoints among candidates for the board of directors to be elected in late November.

Members will vote by mail to choose four board members from a slate of seven candidates presented by the CVPOA nominations committee. Directors will be installed Jan. 6 for two-year terms.

Five persons will run unopposed as officers of the CVPOA for one-year terms.

Candidates for the board of directors are Richard Abbott, Peter Coakley, Doral Eardley, Mrs. Jerry Foote, Edward Hubbard, Mary Ann ("Corky") Matthews, and Richard Nimmons.

Officer candidates are Richard Dalsemer, president; Robert Greenwood, vice-president; Lynn Morris, treasurer; Barbara Olson, recording secretary; Jacqueline Marks, corresponding secretary.

CVPOA members may nominate other candidates before Nov. 22 by presentation of petitions bearing the signatures of at least 15 members, said Cynthia Hall, a member of the Nominations Committee.

With more than 1,500 members, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association is a powerful political voice for the Valley. It is not, however, a voice which has spoken with unanimity on all the issues.

The CVPOA board of directors has gone on record in favor of a new dam on the upper Carmel Valley, but not all directors or members subscribe to that position, as was evident at the recent hearing by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District on design of a dam.

CVPOA President Jack Sassard spoke strongly in favor of "full speed ahead" on a new dam, while former CVPOA board member Earl Moser urged caution and a wait-and-see approach.

Among candidates for the board of directors in the November election, there is some divergence of opinion on environmental matters.

"Corky" Matthews recently stepped down as a member of the Central Coast Regional Coastal Commission and is generally regarded as a strong environmentalist.

She is committed to "small scale growth" in harmony with the Carmel Valley Master Plan, according to her campaign statement which is to be mailed to all CVPOA members.

"As a board member, I would work to strengthen the CVPOA commitment to greater emphasis on conservation, reclamation, and reuse to resolve the water supply dilemma," Mrs. Matthews said.

"Priorities include approval of a revised Master Plan, a watershed management plan to preserve the natural values of the Carmel River, and protection of the aquifer from contamination and overuse."

EDWARD HUBBARD, another candidate for the board of directors, on the other hand favors immediate action for a dam on the upper Carmel River.

"I concur with Jack Sassard," Hubbard said concerning dam construction. "You've got to do something about it. I'm in favor of a 27,000 acre foot dam."

Hubbard is unique among board candidates in his proposal that consideration be given to the possibility of Valley incorporation.

"We are a non-political organization, but indications are that we are nothing more than a vocal minority in the larger scheme of things," Hubbard said in his campaign statement. "If we can not have a political action committee, perhaps we are faced with the necessity of inevitable incorporation so that we may slow down growth with some enactments of our own.

Richard Abbott, who has lived in Carmel Valley with his wife since 1977, stressed the need to maintain the Valley's oft-mentioned "rural character."

"I am deeply committed to maintaining the rural atmosphere of Carmel Valley and wholeheartedly support the Master Plan. While I keenly recognize the need to preserve the individual rights of property owners, residents and business people, I favor growth only to the extent that it will not harm the area through excessive pollution of air, water or landscape, or adversely deplete our water supply."

Peter Coakley, a seven-year resident of the Valley, said he is particularly concerned about Carmel Valley Village, and would promote "cautious, thoughtful and tasteful growth."

"As one of the founding members of the Village Improvement Committee, I have worked for the undergrounding of utilities and pedestrian pathways. My dream is to see our village enhanced in its natural charm."

With respect to possible construction of a dam, and the size of such a dam, Coakley said: "I haven't studied the issue enough to have a position, but I will. I am a moderate on growth. I'd like it concerned and considerate, rather than rampant."

Mrs. Jerry Foote, another board candidate, said she has an "open mind" on the question of a dam. She served as a member of the citizens advisory committee for revision of the Valley Master Plan, and said the projected growth limit of 2,500 housing units in that document may have to be revised.

"That 2,500 was a compromise figure I thought we could live with," Mrs. Foote said. "I think it needs to be looked at again in light of the Master Plan EIR (environmental impact report)."

"I have no use for no-growthers. I'm a great believer in controlled growth with firm controls. But I don't think the CVPOA will be speaking with one voice on these issues."

DORAL EARDLEY has lived on the Monterey Peninsula for eight years, and in Carmel Valley for two and one-half years. He is vice president of the Rancho Tierra Grande Association. He is a retired World War II Navy commander with 20 years of service.

"I believe each member of the community should at some time do his or share in assuming a responsibility to help promote the common interests of all members," Eardley said in his campaign statement.

Richard Nimmons has been a member of the CVPOA board of directors for the last two years and will seek re-election.

"I favor and will work for implementation of the Master Plan to safeguard the Valley's beauty and natural resources," Nimmons said. "I am equally concerned about the problems of sewage, noise and air pollution of our area, and the water supply."

"I favor CVPOA's aggressive, articulate approach to solving problems."

Water District candidates to speak at forum

Carmel River Watch will hold a public forum for candidates to the board of directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 22 at Carmel Middle School.

The environmental organization has invited all eight candidates to present their views and to answer questions from the public.

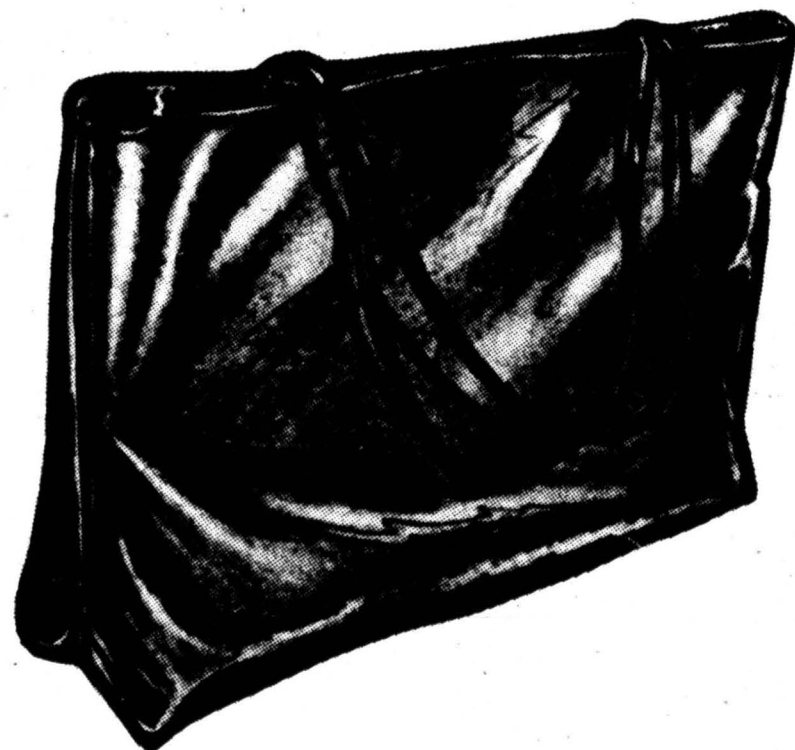

Candidates for the two, four-year terms of office are incumbent Ed Lee of Carmel Valley, Janice O'Brien of Pebble Beach, incumbent Nancy McClintock of Seaside, Roy Daniels of Seaside, Donald Durant of Pebble Beach, and Michael Pekin of Monterey.

Candidates for the one, two-year term of office are attorney Zan Henson of Carmel Valley and Russel Hansen of Monterey.

Armanasco to speak in N.Y.

David Armanasco, general manager of Durney Vineyards of Carmel Valley, has been chosen as the featured guest speaker for the meeting of the prestigious International Gold and Silver Plate Society hosted by the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, New York, Nov. 6-8. Armanasco's subject will be "The thirst for wine knowledge."

This is the 11th annual meeting of the International Gold and Silver Plate Society, which is composed of individuals who have received these special gold and silver plate awards, in recognition of outstanding contributions to American cuisine, from the International Foodservice Manufacturers Assn.

'Service Center' proposed east of CV Village

THE UPPER Carmel Valley Advisory Committee will hold a "town meeting" at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 27 at the Carmel Valley Youth Center on a proposed service center just east of Carmel Valley Village.

Developers of the project presented their plan to the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association board of directors last week, where some questions about noise and traffic safety were raised.

The proposed Valley Service Center would be a 30,000 sq. ft. commercial development at 55 E. Carmel Valley Rd. covering five acres of a 7.5 acre parcel.

Space would be leased to contractors, tradesmen and service providers, with the emphasis on those businesses already in operation in the Valley, Jim Shakal, one of the project's partners, told the CVPOA board.

The facility would not be primarily a retail outlet, but rather a centralized location for the various trades and businesses which now provide services to Carmel Valley residents, he said.

"We feel a need for service businesses to establish themselves in a central location in the Valley," Shakal said. "It is intended for those who are already in business in the Valley."

Shakal said the development could also provide a convenient location to park heavy equipment, such as backhoes, as well as trucks used by plumbers, electricians, and contractors.

The parcel, which was once considered as an alternative location for the Tantamount Theatre, is zoned C-1 for commercial use. Rents in the completed facility could range from 30 cents to 60 cents per square foot, Shakal said.

Estimated cost of the total project, including land acquisition, is about $800,000, he indicated.

"It would mean less driving, less traffic, and less air pollution in the Valley if we had this," Shakal said. He estimated there are between 35 to 40 suitable businesses which could use the service center.

"Besides plumbing shops and contractors, we could have auto services, towing services, heating contractors, furniture refinishers, cabinet shops," Shakal said.

Wray Hiltabrand, who lives at Valle Vista Road and Carmel Valley Road, told the CVPOA board of directors he is concerned about traffic safety in the area of the proposed service center.

"The proposed location is in a natural bowl formation, which can create noise problems," Hiltabrand said. "In addition to the destruction of visual resources, there would be echo effects from the traffic."

"It will have a depressant effect on residential land values. I think it's a good idea to have a location for a service center, but this is not it."

"That's a dangerous curve," said Carmel Valley attorney Zan Henson. "At that corner, people tend to travel at a high rate of speed coming from the east. There is a danger there."

"Everybody thinks it's a good project, but they don't want it near their home," said Tom Saunders of Carmel Valley, another of the project partners.

"There's a need to put contractors and service businesses here that serve the community. There isn't a thing you can do in this Valley that someone won't see you."

SERVICE CENTER proposed for 55 East Carmel Valley Road, only a half-mile from the Village, will be the subject of a "town hall" meeting of the Upper Carmel Valley Advisory Committee at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 27 at the Carmel Valley Youth Center.

Piccadilly designer won't use neighboring parcel

PICCADILLY PARK designer Gordon Andrews has abandoned plans to include a privately-owned slice of land adjacent to the city property as part of the park design.

Instead, Andrews will pursue a park design which includes some type of fence along the property line, and the possibility of plantings on the small parcel behind the Merry Loom.

That slice of land is owned by Mary Lou Linhart and her brother George Linsley — the same people from whom the city purchased the 40-by-80 foot Piccadilly parcel for $400,000.

A preliminary park landscape design which Andrews developed and submitted to city officials in September showed use of the adjacent private property as part of the total park design. At that point, the property owners'

No agreement was ever worked out attorney said no official agreement had been worked out to allow city use of the property.

Andrews plans to present revised park plans to the Forestry Commission at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 27 at Carmel City Hall.

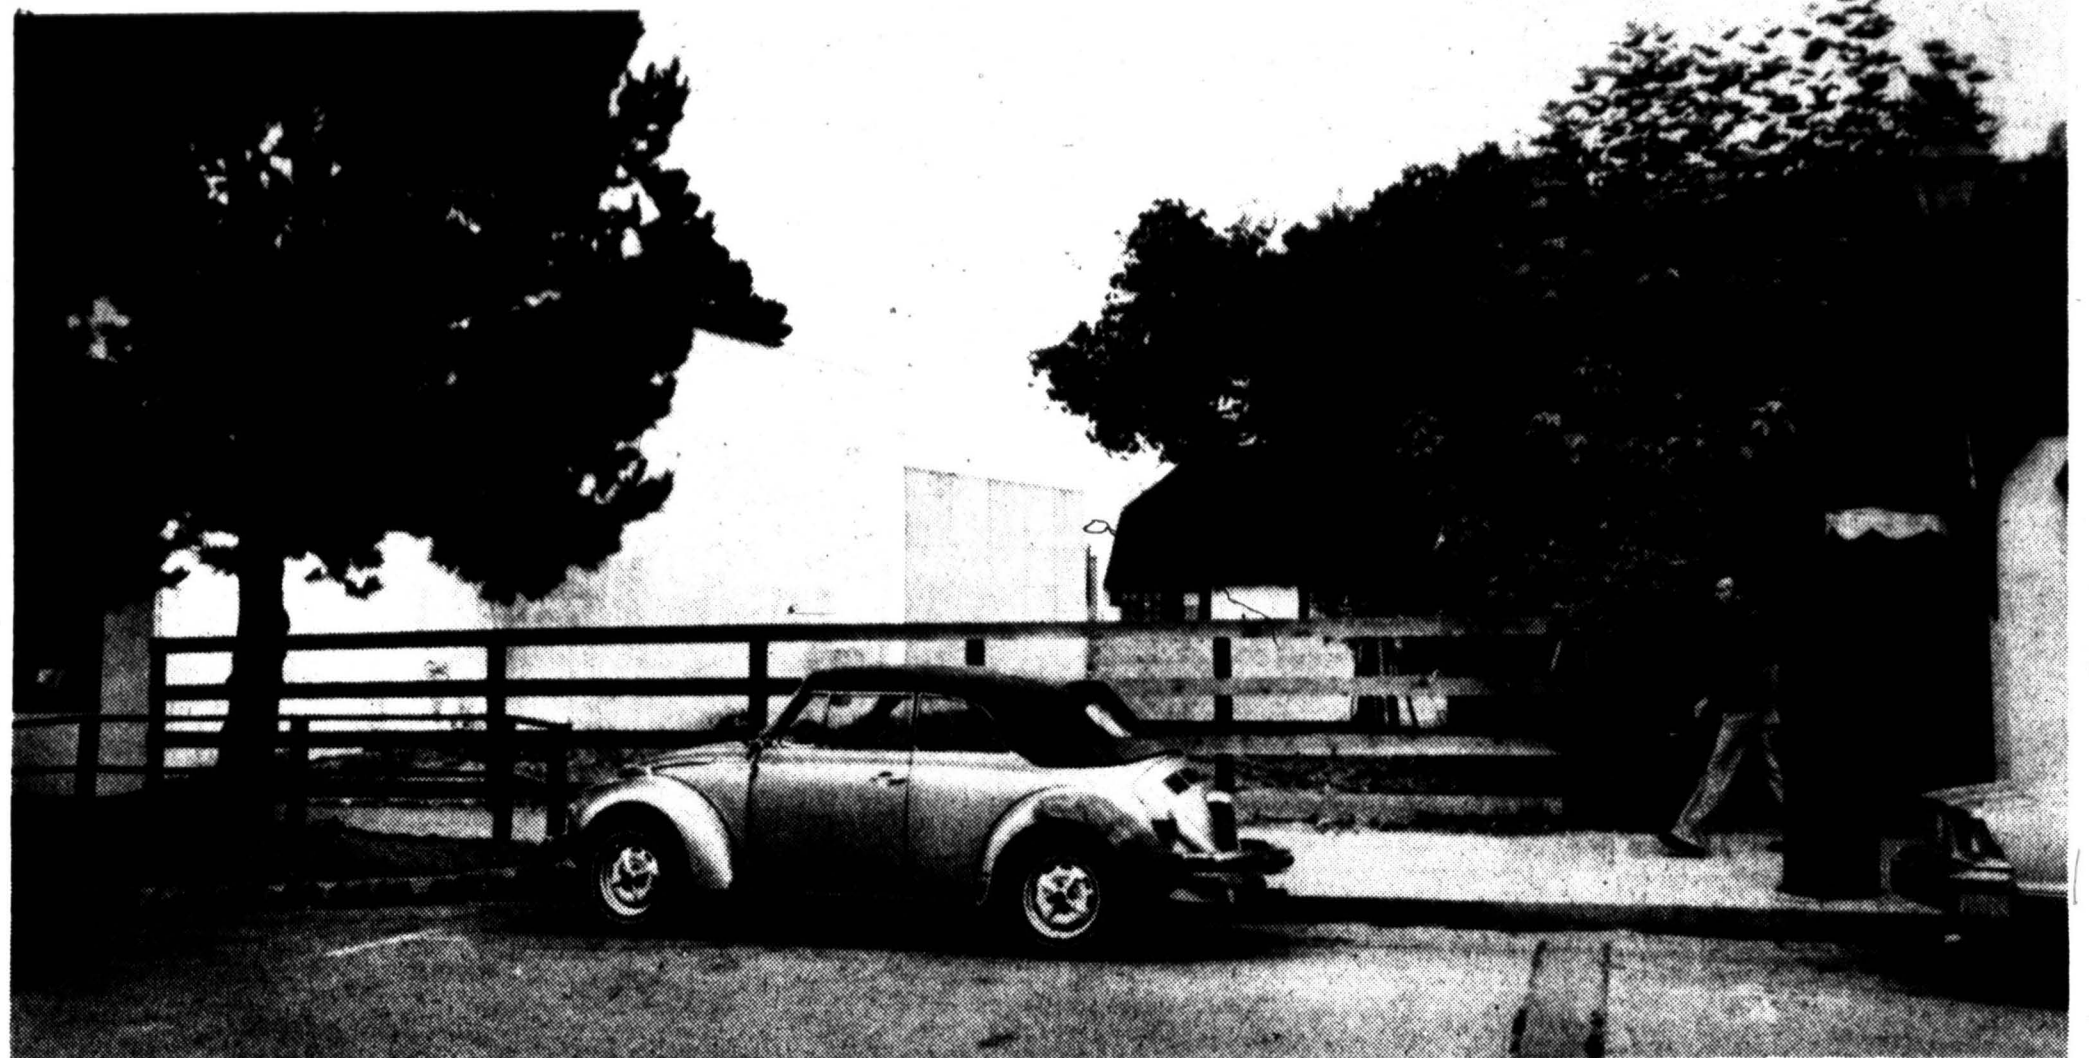

"When I talked with Mrs. Linhart's lawyer about putting up a fence along the property line, he said it looked good and probably would be agreeable," Andrews said. "There is no official word from them yet."

The decision to delete use of the adjacent Linhart property as part of the park landscape was partially political and partially esthetic, Andrews said.

"It made things a lot easier right off the bat to leave it out," Andrews said. "I started to look at what would happen if we put in a fence with a few plants on their property. This way, they could use the land in the future if they wanted to."

"The use of the entire space has been ruled out."

Thomas Hawley, Mrs. Linhart's attorney, confirmed that some informal discussions about landscape designs had been held with Andrews, but said no formal agreement for any kind of use of her property — either for a fence or for the entire parcel — had been worked out.

"We have had discussions only with the architect," Hawley said. "Nobody from the city has ever formally approached us. We have had no contact with any official emissary of the city."

"We have indicated informally that we would be willing to get together with them, but we have not held any discussions yet."

One reason for the delay is the fact that City Administrator Doug Peterson — who was to meet with Mrs. Linhart and her attorney — has been out of town for two weeks because of a death in his family.

LAFCO to take steps Tuesday to form PB Services District

THE LOCAL Agency Formation Commission will consider steps for creation of the Pebble Beach Community Services District when it meets at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 27 in the Monterey County Courthouse, Salinas.

LAFCO executive director Mike Johnson will recommend dissolution of County Fire Service Area 42 and the Pebble Beach Sanitary District, and the formation of the new district.

The proposal originated with a petition from Pebble Beach residents which was heard last month by LAFCO. The agency heard a proposal from the Carmel Sanitary District for a consolidation with the Pebble Beach Sanitary District, but favored the former over the latter.

Johnson said he will recommend that the question of reorganization of both districts into a new community services district be combined on the June, 1982 ballot with an election for a five-member board of directors.

If voters approve the new district, the five directors would take office with the official start of the district on July 1, 1982, Johnson said. Directors would determine by lot who would serve two-year terms, and who would serve four-year terms.

Johnson will also recommend to the LAFCO board that:

- All funds, assets, and liabilities of both districts be transferred to the new district.

- The new district assume liability for payment of all outstanding bonded indebtedness of both existing districts.

- Employment contracts, seniority rights, and retirement benefits of all employees of both districts be continued with the new district.

- Territory of the new community services district be contiguous with the territory of the Pebble Beach Sanitary District and County Service Area 42.

Carmel/PB sanitary boards continue to feud

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE CARMEL Sanitary District board of directors is skeptical about a "suggestion for cooperation" from the Pebble Beach Sanitary District.

Directors chose last Thursday to make no response to a letter from the Pebble Beach district which sought a joint challenge of the designation of Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance.

Their decision was based partly on the advice of counsel Don Freeman that settlement of a Carmel lawsuit over Pebble Beach's refusal to pay its one-third share of a water reclamation project is imminent.

And in part the board agreed with manager Mike Zambory that to join Pebble Beach in a challenge to the Carmel Bay ASBS designation would be a mortal blow to the district $13.7 million water reclamation project.

The Carmel Sanitary District's water reclamation project envisions transport of treated effluent from its treatment plant to Pebble Beach golf courses for irrigation. This would allow the district to comply with a state mandate to stop discharge into Carmel Bay most months of the year.

The Pebble Beach request came in the form of a resolution passed by that district's board of directors Sept. 30. It was prompted by the recent challenge of the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency to the state Water Resources Control Board's designation of a "zone of prohibition" in Monterey Bay.

Carmel Bay is, after all, only a "small portion of Monterey Bay" and "all scientific monitoring of the effect of effluent on the Carmel Bay ASBS shows no definable effect on the biology of Carmel Bay," the Pebble Beach resolution states.

The Pebble Beach Sanitary District has sought previously to have the Carmel Bay ASBS designation overturned because of its opposition to the $13.7 million water reclamation project.

If a joint appeal to the state succeeded, "significant cost reductions in the costs of a reclamation program" would be realized, the Pebble Beach district said.

"It is difficult on a daily basis to understand where the Pebble Beach Sanitary District is coming from because they are constantly shifting their position 'from one objective to another,'" Zambory advised the Carmel board.

"The Pebble Beach Sanitary District has repeatedly requested a re-hearing on the ASBS designation. Their appeal being repeatedly denied, they attempt to obtain the State Water Resources Control Board approval for a treatment plant and reclamation facility within the Del Monte Forest.

"Being turned down on this request, the PBSB argues the virtue of a project which would extend the present ocean outfall to a point beyond the limits of the ASBS. Failing again, the PBSB requests that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District manage the reclamation project."

THE LATEST move by the Pebble Beach Sanitary District is nothing more than a disguised attempt to "destroy the early start reclamation-disposal project," Zambory said.

Other obstacles to implementation of the district's water reclamation project include uncertainty about funding of $6.5 million for the third phase of the project. Zambory said no official notification of the status of grant funds had been received from the state.

"Challenging the ASBS at this late date would appear to be ridiculous as well as costly," Zambory informed the board.

"Ridiculous because it would be a contradiction of the past three years of Carmel

'It is difficult on a daily basis to understand where the Pebble Beach Sanitary District is coming from because they are constantly shifting their position from one objective to another'

Sanitary District policy, and costly because it would endanger the federal and state share of the $1.4 million design contract."

The Pebble Beach proposal was even more confusing, Zambory said, since it came on the heels of an attempt by the Pebble Beach district to have the entire Monterey Peninsula share the cost of the water reclamation project, through the Monterey Regional Water Control Agency.

"It would appear ill-advised to attempt to foist the cost of our reclamation project, including its annual maintenance and operation, on the citizens outside our service area," Zambory told the board.

"How does one justify to a Seaside resident that in some unidentifiable manner our project releasing potable water to the peninsula is going to benefit him to the extent that he should share the wastewater disposal costs?"

Fateful school board meeting mittee on estimated lease or sale values of various school facilities at last Tuesday's session. The volunteer members are architect Don Goodhue, real estate manager John Mahoney, developer Skip Marquard, banker Don Nelson, and engineer Clayton Neill.

THE LIMITS of the Carmel Valley Master Plan on development must be weighed against potential value of properties, Marquard said.

"It may be next fall before the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan is adopted," Marquard advised the board. "We looked at the potential gross value of properties and their values based on other real estate sales, plus development problems with the Master Plan."

The potential value of the Carmel High School campus, for instance, is $3 million if 50 residential units could be developed on its 22 acres, the committee reported. Its potential lease value is $300,000 to $500,000 per year.

"The value of the high school might run in excess of $9 million, but that would require development costs of $2 million and a delay of a year or more," Marquard said.

By comparison, the estimated sale value of the middle school site, depending on use, ranged from $450,000 for four building sites on 12 acres up to $2 million for 15 sites on the middle school campus combined with property owned by the district on Rio Road.

Estimated annual lease value of the middle school is $450,000, the committee said.

"Middle School was the most marketable in terms of a lease, as opposed to sale," Goodhue informed the board.

Neill said the Carmelo School site would provide "a lot of flexibility" of use by the district. Its estimated annual lease value of $80,000, which is enhanced by its proximity to commercial uses in the Valley, Neill said.

"You have a mix of sale and lease decisions, as well as political decisions, to make," Neill said. "Leasing allows the district to have its cake and eat it too."

Trustee Barbara Sanford wondered whether it would be possible for the district to move any of its buildings.

"It's possible, but not economically feasible," Neill replied.

The committee estimated the potential sale value of the Carmelo School site between $250,000 and $600,000. Estimated sale value of Woods School is between $350,000 and $550,000, with estimated lease income of $100,000 per year.

Estimated sale value of River School is between $750,000 to $900,000, and estimated annual lease value is $170,000, the committee reported.

*Mickey the Barber to re-open in
Bell Tower Court*

By FLORENCE MASON

EDITOR'S NOTE: Last week's column, as it appeared in the Pine Cone, started with a statement that "The Rose Lady is not officially licensed as an 'unclassified business' in Carmel." A typographical error reversed the sense of that statement. It should have read: "The Rose Lady is NOW officially licensed . . ." as the headline suggested.

The Business License and Code Review Board usually deals with shops, companies, businesses. But one recent meeting provided testimony for the vigor and health of individual enterprise. There was even mention of Pandora, of Pandora's box fame.

One applicant for a new business license told me that it is the 14th business he has had by himself since 1938! And he is returning to the same location he left in 1977.

Meekly Smith — Mickey of Carmel — is re-opening a barber shop and men's hair styling salon in the Bell Tower Court, San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth. I caught up with him earlier this month as he was transforming the former Nippon Nook into a most attractive barber shop. The space is very small, tucked away at the rear of the court, but it has a small deck just outside.

Smith moved to this same location from his first Carmel shop — in the Plaza — when the Plaza expanded. When he left the area in 1977, it was to develop plans and property in Hawaii. The plans fell before a diagnosis of cancer for Smith's wife.

Before she died, the Smiths returned to this area; it was too late to save Mrs. Smith's life but Smith hoped that what they learned through the advanced scanning techniques available here could be of some benefit to others. This was when the Smiths first became acquainted with the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula — an organization still "very near and dear to me," Smith said.

Now he is carrying on by himself, in a home that was the first house built in Tierra Grande III. "That was about 15 years ago," Smith said, "when there were still dirt roads." Smith's son is in electronics research and development.

This warm, sensitive man is also a pilot (as a result of World War II training) and he is looking forward to building his own plane. But first, he will establish his shop in a location that has special meaning for him. "I've missed the involvement with my clients," he said, adding that this has been especially important to him since his wife's death.

Another individual entrepreneur, this time a newcomer to Carmel, is Norma Lacap, who is a cosmetologist. Ms. Lacap will operate from rented space at La Coiffure in the Lobos Lodge Court.

Ms. Lacap has lived in Seaside for 11 years and worked as a cosmetologist in a salon at Del Monte Shopping Center. It was that urge to have her own business, to be independent, that brought her to Carmel. She said she doesn't have any specialties — "I do a little bit of everything."

Norma, born in the Philippines, has four children, ranging in age from 11 to 18.

Almon Babbitt, CPA, is new to Carmel but not to the Peninsula or to the world of individual enterprise. He has had two professional accounting offices — one in Salinas and one in Monterey; he will close the latter in favor of a Carmel location on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth.

Al Babbitt and his family moved to the Peninsula five years ago "to get away from the rat race around San Francisco and for the atmosphere here, all the area has to offer." Now he and his wife, Judith, and their three daughters — Stacey, Dana and Jill — live in Toro Park.

Babbitt moved one office to Carmel because he has a growing number of local clients and wanted to be closer to them. A former IRS agent (his master's degree was in taxation), he said he is delighted to be the one "wearing the white hat" now.

It was "Concerning Roses," still another new business, that led BLCRB members to speak of Pandora's box.

To explain: Sandi Jeffers applied for a license "for the retail sale of roses on private property in the commercial district." Yes, similar to the Rose Lady, whose license had been approved just a week before.

Ms. Jeffers, with permission of the restaurant owners, goes to local restaurants in the evening and offers roses for sale to dinner customers. In this case, there were no questions about the legality of preparing the roses in a resident area, she lives in Monterey, where there are no prohibitive regulations about that.

Several members of the board, while having no objection to this particular enterprise, raised questions about the possible proliferation of sales activities in local restaurants or other places in Carmel's commercial districts. It was Sandy Swain, representing the planning commission on the board, who gave voice to the possibility of opening a Pandora's box. As a result, she cast the lone "no" vote on Ms. Jeffers' application.

She was careful to say it was not a vote against "Concerning Roses" as such. Police Chief Bill Ellis also spoke of serious concerns and Building Inspector Ron Warren said, "I'm not comfortable with this type of sale, but there is nothing in the code now to prohibit it. We should take a look at that."

City Attorney George Brehmer concurred, saying that under the present City Code applications would be considered on a case by case basis, and in order to deny any one application, a distinction would have to be made between that application and others already approved. The other possibility, Brehmer said, was to consider amending the code, perhaps initiating a zoning change. Members of the board agreed that the matter should be studied further.

In the meantime, Sandi Jeffers will continue to sell roses in restaurants on the Peninsula. She told the board that she used to work for the Rose Lady; someone on the board commented that with 77 restaurants in Carmel, there is room for more than one purveyor of roses. This evidence of the growing popularity of this type of enterprise promoted another member to say, "Romance certainly isn't dead!"

At present, most of Ms. Jeffers' contracts are with restaurants in Monterey; she has only one in Carmel. She dresses appropriately for her romantic role, in gowns made by her grandmother.

Several people took us to task for not highlighting the contribution cartoonist Bill Bates made to that delightful cartoon map at Nielsen's Market. I guess we assumed localites knew that it was largely his brainchild and the product of his talent!

Over the years, Bates developed most of the cartoon characters appearing on the map and according to co-artist Carole Minou, he has been working on the map almost every day for the last three months. How did they share the labor? Ms. Minou started at the bottom while Bates started painting at the top.

The merger between First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Carmel and San Francisco Savings and Loan, first mentioned in this column in July, has finally been completed. As of Oct. 1, the combined associations now offer a branch network of 29 offices throughout Northern California.

The new name of the S&L is San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan Association. Not much else has been changed, however: personnel at the Carmel Rancho Center offices are the same. Passbooks, certificates, etc. are also the same — at least until the accounting changes are phased in.

While we are speaking of Savings and Loan companies, it should be noted that Home Federal will open its new office Nov. 2 on Via Nona Marie near the Barnyard. The temporary trailer is a good-looking facility in itself but a permanent office is being constructed. Visitors to the new office will receive copies of "The West," a book illustrating the natural beauty

First a move (from Eugene, Ore.) then a new business (Note'orious), and next a new baby! That is the exciting world of John McCloud and his wife, Mary Massa, who are about to open a greeting card and stationery store on Seventh between San Carlos and Dolores.

It is the baby — their first, expected late in January — that motivated the young couple to move to Carmel. As McCloud put it: "Mary grew up in this area and we thought it would be nice to have our baby here and bring it up in a sunnier place." In spite of Carmel's frequently cloudy summer this year, the couple is very happy with their move and their new home at Third and Guadalupe.

McCloud also said that he is surprised at how well the preparations for opening Note'orious have gone. "So far, so good," he told me. "Everyone has been wonderful — so friendly and encouraging."

The encouragement has been appreciated because both John McCloud and Mary Massa are new to retail business; until now, their careers have been in the field of mental health counseling.

McCloud said that the unusual name resulted from brainstorming sessions with friends. The shop will carry greeting cards, including the popular Boyington line, notepaper and other stationery and desk top items.

Belly dancing with a special twist is the new business of Samia Sahira. Samia, co-director of the Desert Fire Dance Troup, and her partner — Zanobia — have just begun to offer "Belly Grams." They are a very special way of honoring a special occasion, such as a birthday or anniversary.

Samia, Zanobia or one of their dancers appears and does a belly dance for the guest of honor. Often, a message is delivered too — perhaps written on the dancer's veil. Or a special touch may be provided by presentation of a rose, held in the dancer's mouth, while she danced, to the honored guest. "It stirs up a lot of interest!" was Samia's understatement.

"We heard that people were doing this sort of thing up north and in the east," Samia said, "so we thought we would try it as a new service." The group will also continue to entertain at private parties, fairs and festivals as it has been doing for about five years.

Samia, who has lived on the Peninsula for 12 years, is married to rancher Tom Russo and lives in Carmel Valley. She teaches dancing and dramatic arts as well as performing and now, managing Belly Grams.

Going out of business: the Carmel Valley beer and wine store known as Toby's Jug, on Delfino Place.

And another — this one a victim of a double rent increase in Carmel (from $700 per month to $1400): R. E. Smith Gifts in the Court of the Fountains on Mission. "We just can't make that here in the back of the court," co-owner Anne Smith said.

What will she be doing? "Looking for a job!" She went on to say that there are compensations — for instance, much less to worry about.

Another person who will be looking for a job is Paula Sonner, owner of Bellissima, women's clothing boutique on San Carlos near Sixth, which is also closing.

When he first came to Carmel in 1949, hairstylist George Fraley spent more of his time scuba diving off Carmel Beach than he did in his first shop. The young woman hairdressers he "inherited" when he took over the shop would run down to the beach and call him in when he had an appointment.

All that has changed. Today "George — Hairstylist" is as busy as he wants to be with both male and female customers — in his one-man shop on Mission above the Clam Box restaurant.

When he moved here 32 years ago from Los Angeles, George was somewhat ahead of his time. Trained in modern haircutting techniques and teaching them, he found that Peninsula women were still wearing their hair long, swept up, in page boy style and even filled out with extra hair pieces. It was a while before his system of short hair and sculptured

"skip" waves caught on. But eventually, it did.

George is a perfectionist and an exponent of the most natural as well as most attractive look. "There is no excuse now for a bad permanent or tint," he said. "The chemicals we use and the equipment that's available have greatly improved over the years."

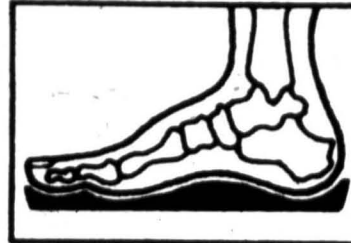

Although he rarely goes diving these days, white-haired George remains a very active person. His bicycle is his chief means of exercise as well as transportation from the home he and his wife own in Pebble Beach; this year's special vacation was a lengthy trip with a group of cyclists.

If you are looking for examples of enjoyable retirements — and there are many in Carmel — how about Wayne Rice? For 13 years, Rice maintained a jewelry workshop in Carmel, designing and manufacturing everything himself. Then he "retired." To him, that meant "taking care of old customers and keeping busy." He tried being available to those old customers — and a few new ones — just three days a week. After a year or so on that basis, however, he had been "found out" to such an extent that the number of customers remained as high as it had been before his so-called retirement. Then he decided just to take appointments and when he had enough of those, he would not take any more. That's why you may hear on his telephone answering machine a statement like this: "I'm sorry; I can't take any more work this month."

It is working pretty well now, Rice said. "I have time to visit my grandchildren and friends. My wife (Eloise) and I even had a three-week trip recently." But he still enjoys his work. What is special about it? "I have the nicest customers in the country," Rice said with conviction.

Was Dr. Paul Woudenberg, Church of the Wayfarer, privy to the secret that Sunday, Oct. 11 was the date for the annual Sand Castle Contest when he announced his sermon topic earlier that week? He spoke on: Sand with Soul!

Feet looking for real comfort deserve to find BIRKENSTOCKS!

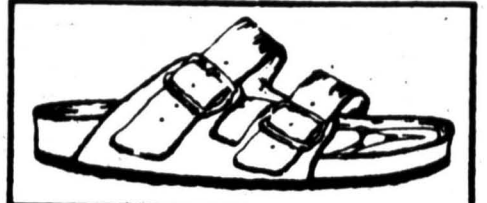

"My feet were in such bad shape I couldn't even stand on them . . . (then) I ordered a pair of your marvelous, marvelous sandals. I started out wearing them an hour the first day and a little longer each day . . . What are my feet like today? I can walk, they never tire or hurt. But best of all, I'd have lost all of my corns and calluses. And my feet feel so good, just like they did when I was a child . . . and I'm nearly seventy!"

How the coach sees it

Padres played best game of the year

By DICK MOLEN
Head Coach, Carmel H.S. Padres

"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" Friday night. I will elaborate . . . the Forum I refer to is the King City Stadium, and the unusual happening was a group of athletes from Carmel High School decided, flat out, to start playing football. End result: the best game we played all year against the finest team in the league.

The game started in much the same fashion as the last few games. Carmel fumbled the ball on the opening kickoff. King City recovered on the Padre 29 and, in two plays, scored a T.D.

Standing on the sidelines in a state of disbelief, shock, anger, frustration, etc., etc. I noticed an unusual atmosphere on the playing field. I could see immediately that for the first time this season the Carmel players were preparing themselves to respond to this adversity that faced them within the first minute of the game.

Respond they did, and in a grand fashion. Leading 6-0 (P.A.T. failed) the Mustangs kicked off to the Padres' special return team who brought the ball back up the field to the 35-yard line. At this point all similarity to anything that had been happening in previous games no longer existed. The Carmel offense, with Q.B. John Franklin at the helm, drove 65 yds. for a touchdown.

This drive featured an offensive line that got off the ball, blocked, and was aggressive. The backs ran with authority and poise. Fullbacks Earsley and Fritz Griebing grinding out huge chunks of yardage inside, and Tailbacks Holman and Buche running off tackle, were not to be denied on their thrust towards the goal line.

The Padres scored from three yards out, Franklin on a keeper. Mike Kelly's point after was good and Carmel took the lead, 7-6.

The Mustangs, unable to move the ball against a Padre

PLAYER OF THE WEEK:
Running Back Gene Earsley

defense that was excellent for the most part of the evening, gave the ball back to Carmel. The momentum flowing with Carmel sent the Padre offense down the field once more. The offense, finding success on the ground, moved the ball to the King City 30-yard line. Mike Kelly kicked a field goal and the score was 10-6, still in the first quarter.

The second quarter was scoreless. Both teams played each other evenly both defensively and offensively, although the statistics indicated that Carmel outplayed the Mustangs in all areas in the first half, outgaining King City 106-76 in total offense, and were penalized five yards to King City's 60.

The second half of the game went to the Mustangs. They are the class of the league and their play in the second half demonstrated this. The third quarter featured fine football.

The teams were aware that this one was going to be the wire, and that any mistake, error, or break could be the game. With 8:48 elapsed in the 3rd period and Carmel still ahead 10-6, King City took over on downs at their 18-yard line.

On their first offensive series, David Stireman, the Mustang's talented quarterback, kept the ball on an option play and broke past a Padre defensive man and was on his way 82 yards for the touchdown that turned the momentum of the game back to King City for the remainder of the contest. Stireman's conversion pass fell incomplete, and the score was 12-10.

As the last few minutes of the third quarter began to appear on the score board, the Mustang's powerful line began to exert itself and take control. Following a fumble powered by an alert Carmel defense, a penalty moved the ball back to the Padre 25-yard line. The next pass play was broken up and another penalty was stepped off against the Padres. This put Carmel deep in the hole at their own 13 yard line, with a second-and-27 situation. A punt gave the ball to King City with plenty of time and excellent field position on the Padre 42-yard line. Seven plays later King City's Jason Smith jammed his way up the middle through a tired Carmel defense for 14 yards and a touchdown. The conversion was good and the score was 19-10 in favor of King City as the third quarter ended.

The fourth quarter was scoreless. Both teams were tiring, with King City's overall team strength giving them a decided edge in the last minutes of the game.

The final two points of the game came near the end of the contest when Padre quarterback Franklin tried to unload a pass from his end zone, fumbled under a blitz by the Mustang defense as the game came to a close. The final score was King City 21, Carmel 10.

GENERAL COMMENTS: There is no question in my mind that this was our best effort so far this year. Looking at the game films, I saw tremendous improvement with our defense and offense. This was very satisfying to me, taking into consideration the opponent we played last Friday night.

Two assistant coaches played a major role in preparing our team for the game. Our head Frosh-Soph coach, Kirk Warburton, gave me an excellent, detailed scouting report that was extremely helpful. Our Varsity defensive coach Dennis Byerly, aware that I was not pleased with the performance of our defense over the past few weeks, made changes that worked beautifully.

The overall performance of our team was gratifying and I couldn't ask for more from the boys. They played the best team in the league, beating them the first half. Toward the end of the game, they tired and made a few costly mistakes and lost. They demonstrated all the qualities that make a football player, and were in a position to win that game right up to the final gun. They have arrived . . . we are now a football team.

PLUS SIDE: No injuries. Our offense looks very good. The defense is sound and greatly improved. Attitude of players excellent.

MINUS SIDE: We had more penalties in this game than all others combined. Eight to be exact. I felt some of the calls were questionable.

THIS WEEK'S GAME: There is no game this week; we have a "bye." I am looking forward to a two-week preparation period ahead giving us some extra time to get ready for R.L.S. I will comment on this game in next week's column.

PLAYER OF THE WEEK: Gene Earsley. I can't say enough about Gene. His performance against King City was great. On offense, his running was the best it has been all year, and defensively he did all we asked of him and more. His attitude, leadership, football abilities make him one of the best on our squad.

Allen Funt to share
best of 'Candid Camera'

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

Smile — You're on Candid Camera! You're right — Allen Funt is up to his old tricks, and this past week he pulled the big surprise on local folks as he filmed some new episodes for an upcoming event, titled: "An Evening with Allen Funt."

Allen, who is donating his time and talent in behalf of F.O.C.U.S. (Friends of Carmel Unified Schools), will do two shows at Sunset Center on Saturday, Nov. 14. The 7 p.m. show will offer reduced student tickets at $5. General admission for both shows (the second at 9:30 p.m.) is $10. But the real goodie will be patron admission (at 9:30 only) which not only gets you reserved seating but also a bit of hob-nobbin' with Allen following the show — and champagne and hors d'oeuvres.

Allen, who will narrate the show from the stage, will show some Candid Camera classics which have never been seen — including some that were a bit too risque to be aired on television when the show was a long-running favorite. Allen will also share behind-the-scenes stories (including goof-offs) with his audience.

A fun part of the evening will be "audience participation" and if you're a really good sport you just might win a new television, camera or some other nice item.

Proceeds from the event will be distributed through F.O.C.U.S. to various areas and projects in the Carmel Unified School District.

HALLOWEEN AND THE KEYSTONE KOPS

Ghosts, ghoulies and the Great Pumpkin will all take a backseat when the crew of Security Pacific National Bank (Carmel office) celebrates their 10th anniversary during the last week of October.

Since the building which they now occupy at 7th and Mission was home base for the original Carmel Police Department, the celebration theme will be police-oriented and will featured much memorabilia from the "good old days" of the police department as well as photographs of early Carmel.

During the week before Oct. 30, cookies and coffee will be served at the bank and customers can sign up for a drawing which will offer the first prize of a picnic basket filled with gourmet goodies. The drawing will be held at 6 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 30 — and that's also the day the fun really gets underway.

The bank staff, including the officers, will be dressed as Keystone Kops (wearing authentic Bobbie uniforms from London). Bank manager Larry McAdara will be dressed as hizzoner and parking lot attendant Spiers Ruskell will wear the striped outfit of a prisoner.

And playing captain of the Keystone Kops will be assistant manager Kathleen Breuleux, decked out in a Lt. Commander's long formal coat which belonged to her husband during his Navy career.

It's "Great Pumpkin" fun again!

"OKTOBERFEST" TIME FOR GERMAN-AMERICAN CLUB

The nip is in the air and the pumpkin is on the vine as members of the German-American Club of the Monterey Peninsula prepare for their annual Oktoberfest at Rancho Canada in Carmel Valley, Sat., Oct. 24.

The special menu will include bratwurst, wiener schnitzel, potato salad and broetchen. Entertainment in the form of good old oomp-pa-pa music will be supplied by the Joe Smiell Band.

Many of the ladies will be in their native dirndl and gents will sport lederhosen.

Tickets may be obtained at the Bavarian Delicatessen, the Viennese Bakery or the Del Monte Pastry Shop, all in Monterey; or at Peter's European Foods in Carmel. Tickets will also be available at the door the evening of the event.

A portion of the proceeds from this event will go to the Blind Service Center of the Monterey Peninsula.

FRED AND PAULINE ARE HOME FROM EUROPE

Lucky Fred and Pauline Stanley were one of 50 American couples invited on a tour of Switzerland and France courtesy of the Jenn-Aire Corp. The Stanleys were guests of Jack and Joan Riggs of Carmel Valley and it's a well-known fact that Jack is distributor of Jenn-Aire products throughout the U.S.

Due to business commitments, the Stanleys had to cut their trip to eight days, but according to Pauline the time was jam-packed with exciting events including a trip from Lausanne, Switzerland to Evian, France, via Lake Geneva on a private yacht. The day's fun included touring and time at the gaming tables.

Another bit of fun was the "auto rally" (two couples per car) which found the group driving through the Cote de Vaud — the beautiful Swiss wine growing area. Pauline said the weather was perfect, so the group toddled up and down the Swiss hillsides and through the tiny villages where they purchased special wines and cheeses.

Next came a trip to Ouchy, a fishing village on the lake adjoining Lausanne. Pauline reminded me that Ouchy was once a favorite hangout of Lord Byron and that while staying there he frequently visited the Chateau Chillon — which was the inspiration for his famous poem, Prisoner of Chillon.

Our travelers were also entertained at a private dinner at Chateau Oron in Vevey — and Vevey is the old homestead of Charlie Chaplin and the current homestead of actor David Niven, who not only lives there but holds an annual balloon race from there each year.

One special highlight of the trip for the entire group was traveling from the Riviera at Montreux to the Swiss mountain resorts on the LaBelle Epoque, the train which was quite famous after the turn of the century but is now used only for very special occasions.

As a special treat for the Jenn-Aire group, the train was hooked to a regular train for the trip through the mountains to Gstaad where royalty (and jet-setters) go to ski and play in the snow. Luncheon aboard the train was picnic fare of fruits, cheese and, of course, wines. And who was privileged to ride the train one month prior to our group? Queen Elizabeth, that's who.

Fred and Pauline cut loose from the group to visit their good friends and former Carmelites, J.P. and Betsy Kunstle and their daughters, Holly and Sylvia, who now live in Geneva. J.P. (taking one of his own beautiful yachts) is off to Turkey where he's starting a yacht charter service which will offer cruises of the Aegean Sea — and according to Pauline, you can probably rent one of J.P.'s yachts for about one mil per month.

But talk about real friendship! The Kunstles will be in Turkey next summer and have offered the Stanleys the use of their Geneva home. Do Fred and Pauline plan to accept the offer? Certainly!

IT'S NEVER TOO SOON TO CHRISTMAS SHOP

Christmas really is just around the corner, so it's time to begin collecting those special gifts for special people.

One group getting a jump on the holiday season is St. Martha's Guild of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, Robinson Canyon Road, Carmel Valley. The ladies will hold their annual holiday bazaar at the church on Oct. 31 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

A gourmet brunch, prepared by the church Needlework Guild, will be served from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Numerous handcrafted items will be available, as well as Christmas decorations and homemade breads, cakes, jams, jellies and numerous other items.

For further information contact Mrs. Albert S. Weaver Jr., at 133 Del Mesa Carmel, Carmel, Calif., 93921 — or phone her at 624-9709.

The two sang songs from various musicals which have been presented at Hidden Valley Seminars and also from Fantasticks, which HVMS will present next spring.

Hidden Valley founder and director Peter Meckel was there to welcome guests including Edith Alt, founder of the Friends. Mr. Meckel told of running into several former Hidden Valley students at Lincoln Center in New York, where he met recently with principals of the N.Y. Philharmonic.

Velour bridge table covers made by Isabelle Brock of Pebble Beach were awarded as prizes for the recent bridge tournament. And other good news is that the funds from the tournament and the Carmel Decorators Show House totaled a significant sum, according to treasurer Harold Fly.

The Friends seek wide membership, and anyone interested in joining can receive further information by writing to Friends of Hidden Valley, Box 116, Carmel Valley, Calif., 93924. Single membership is $10, and couple membership is $15.

GUIDE DOGS FOR THE BLIND FESTIVAL PLANS

The flyer distribution committee of the county Guide Dogs For The Blind January project was entertained at a New Orleans coffee recently at the Pebble Beach home of Mrs. Taher Obaid.

Guests were served French roast coffee with creme fraiche, beignets (prepared by Mrs. Robert Carey of the original Vive le Difference), pain frais and petite rolls. A lovely floral arrangement of blue iris and yellow Peruvian lillies decorated the table.

Mrs. Olbaid was assisted by Mrs. Robert Meyer and Mrs. C. E. Spangenberg.

Mrs. Robert Stanton, chairman of the county committee, announced plans for the two-day Culinary Festival, Jan. 19 and 20, in the Steinbeck Forum of the Monterey Conference Center. Noted French chef Jacques Pepin will present four separate lecture demonstrations.

Mrs. Stanton also revealed that one of the door prizes will be a Cuisinart processor and a complete set of Cuisinart cookware.

SANTA'S ELVES ARE HAVING A BUSY YEAR

There's a touch of Jack Frost in the air and the Fair Ladies of Carmel remind us that Christmas is on the way. For these 28 local women it's Christmas-every-day as they cut, sew, paste and paint — creating thousands of beautiful Christmas decorations and gifts.

Their annual Carmel Christmas Tea and Sale will be held on Friday, Nov. 13 at the Carmel Woman's Club and it's a good bet that this year's event will be something special.

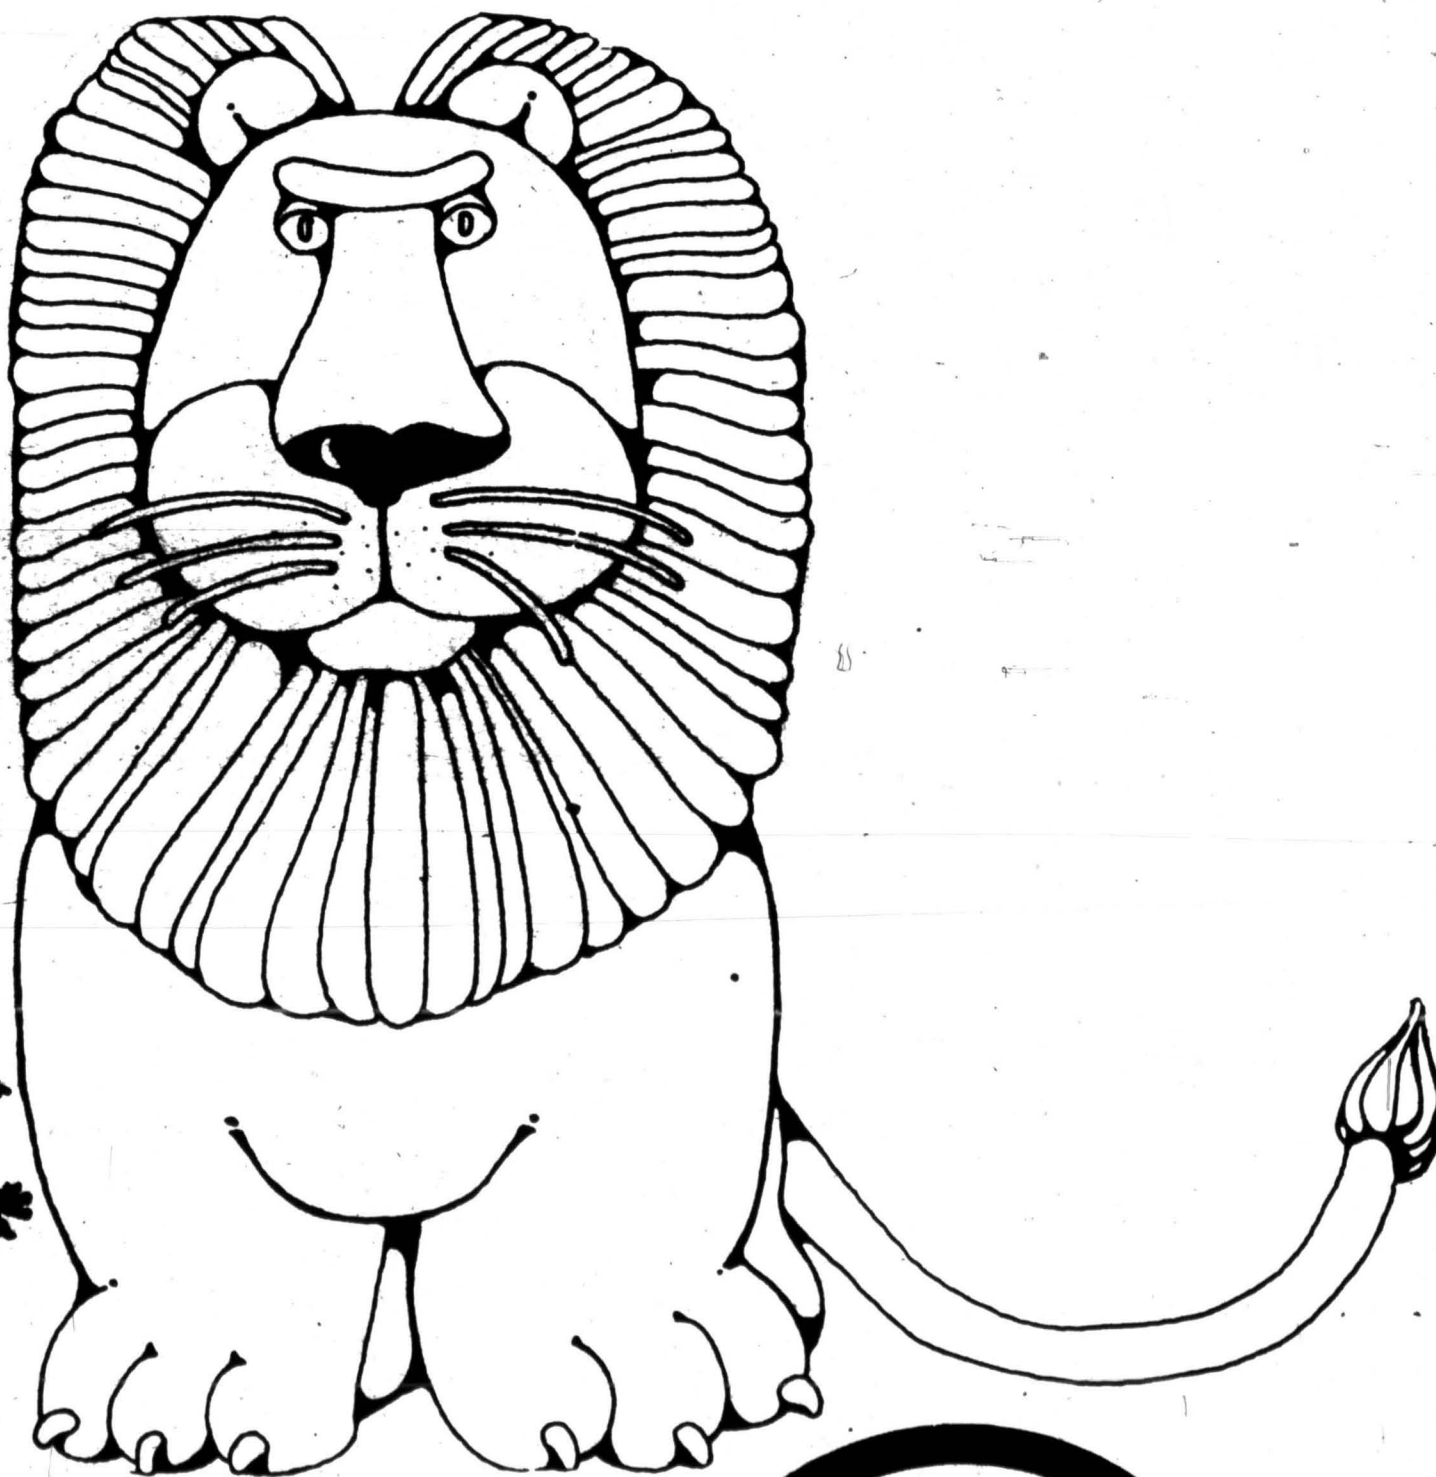

To make sure that everything is ship-shape and ready to go, the ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. Katherine Goode on Wed., Oct. 8 for their final meeting before the big day.

The meeting included a "Show and Tell" time as the ladies shared the secrets of their wares and coordinated the details of their presentation which is a very special part of the day's events.

Marion Leahy of Scotts Valley was hostess for the luncheon that followed the meeting.

are still used for storage of tools and equipment.

Hastings environment is so natural they won't allow grazing or cutting

By ROBERT MISKIMON

QUESTION: Where are you likely to find the most pristine natural environment in Carmel Valley?

Answer: At the University of California's Hastings Natural History Reservation.

Located about 28 miles up the Valley, the reservation is a pure research facility dedicated to the study of native plant and animal life. The 2,000-acre site has been left virtually untouched by human hands for the last 44 years.

"This is a habitat that is wholly natural," explained director Dr. John Davis, a zoologist who has worked at Hastings since 1953. "That means there is no grazing, no cutting, no burning."

The only exceptions to this rule have been a few unfortunate instances when outsiders have brought the dark side of human "civilization" to Hastings.

"We had 400 acres burned last year in an arson fire," Davis said. "And for a few years, we had a motorcycle gang living on the next ranch. They liked to ride around at 3 o'clock in the morning on their bikes, shooting off their guns and hollering."

There haven't been any fires this year, and the motorcycle gang has moved away. A stillness, a heavy natural presence hangs in the air, interrupted only by an occasional graduate student with a telescope and notebook.

One of the students who uses Hastings for his research is Bill Carmen, a zoologist who is studying the scrub jay as part of his PhD thesis from the University of California, Berkeley.

Carmen's work focuses on the jay's social behavior as it relates to acorn storage in native oak trees.

"There is a co-evolutionary relationship between oaks and jays," Carmen explained. "The jays take the acorns and bury them all around. The ones they don't dig up grow into oaks. It helps the jays, and it helps the oaks when they forget where the acorns are buried."

Hastings Natural History Reservation was established in 1937 as a field station of the Museum of Vertebrate Zoology at Cal Berkeley. Earlier, the property had been operated as a cattle ranch by Russell Hastings of San Francisco.

"Mr. Hastings and the university entered into an agreement that the university would manage the land and Mr. Hastings would put up the land for the service of the university from year-to-year," Davis explained.

'One animal we shoot on sight is the wild boar. They'll turn an acre into a mess overnight.'

The Hastings family continued to make the land available to the university for research purposes until 1963, when Mrs. Hastings died and willed the property to the university.

AN ENDOWMENT of $80,000 was included in Mrs. Hastings' will for the maintenance of the property, Davis explained. In subsequent years, Mrs. Fanny Arnold—daughter of Mrs. Hastings—has continued to pay operating expenses for the reservation.

"She even increases the amount each year because of inflation," Davis said. The continued endowment from the Hastings family defrays the cost of utilities, gasoline and maintenance of vehicles, staff travel to and from Berkeley, and a portion of the maintenance man's salary.

"It covers everything except my salary and part of my colleague's salary," Davis said. His colleague is Dr. James Griffin, a botanist and plant ecologist who, like Davis, lives at Hastings year-round.

Even though during summer months, Hastings Reservation generally is covered with graduate students, the animals—perhaps because they are not mistreated—are extremely tame, Davis said.

"They tend to be tamer because we don't have the hurly-burly of a ranch," he said. "The animal life here tends to be richer than in the surrounding countryside. We don't have many more kinds of animals, but we have more in numbers."

Davis estimated that at least 25 species of animals have been intensively studied since the founding of the reservation, as well as many different types of plants.

Most of the animal studies at the reservation are antecological, which means they specialize in a particular species, as opposed to the study of sets of animal species, Davis explained.

"We tend to take an animal species and to study it intensively," he said.

The first director of the reservation, Dr. Jean Linsdale, published three books based on studies there. They covered the California ground squirrel, deer, and the wood rat. One of Davis' studies covered the western fence lizard.

"Our studies are long-term and very thorough. Nobody at Berkeley says what we should study. The animals studied don't have to have any particular commercial value, either. The animal may have certain characteristics that make it interesting."

When the University of California took over Hastings Reservation, the emphasis was on applied research, Davis said. This was reflected in the fact that the university had 70 agricultural research stations in 1967, and only seven pure research facilities, such as Hastings.

"Now we are part of the Natural Land and ORNITHOLOGIST Bill Carmen stalks the scrub jay with a telescope on Hastings Reservation for research on the birds' social behavior.

FORMAL DEDICATION of Hastings Natural History Reservation was made in 1970, and this plaque was placed in recognition of the generosity of the Hastings family. Director Dr. John Davis has been at Hastings since 1953, and has been director since 1960.

and sunlight intensity.

Water Reserve System of the university," Davis said. In the last 15 years, the university has increased the number of pure research facilities to 25.

"We are representative of a certain type of Santa Lucia foothill," Davis said. "There are not that many places where the flora and fauna are unique. But we're the only place of this kind where the vegetation isn't being chewed up by cattle."

ALL TYPES of animals are welcome on Hastings Reservation—with one exception.

"One animal we shoot on sight is the wild boar," Davis said. "They're very destructive. They can plow up a field in a single night, looking for bulbs and acorns. They'll just turn an acre into a mess overnight."

The wild boars which are commonly hunted in Carmel Valley are descendants of animals imported from Eastern Europe and introduced into the Valley in the 1920s by George Gordon Moore, Davis said.

Contrary to folk wisdom, the wild boar is a separate sub-species and does not evolve from domestic pigs which have escaped into the wild, he said. However, domestic pigs sometimes do join and run with packs of boars.

"The last five or six years, the number of boars seems to have taken a tumble."

At an elevation of 1,700 feet above sea level, Hastings Reservation registers hot summer temperatures; winter often brings snow to the high ridges around the site.

The reservation is in the upper watershed of the Carmel River, and streams which flow on the property feed the river. A noticeable drying of the streams has occurred.

"From 1937 to 1944, our streams flowed year-round," Davis said. "From 1945 they really started to dry up. Our streams are intermittent; they're dry in the summer."

One result of this has been the disappearance of the dipper, a species of bird which was prevalent in earlier years.

"The dipper likes to nest beside streams," Davis said. "They aren't here any more since the streams became intermittent."

Even in the higher reaches of the Carmel River watershed, there is riparian vegetation.

"There's sycamore, alder, a few cottonwoods, and willows," Davis said. "They're not well developed. We do have some riparian vegetation. It's not very good, but we have it. Some of the willows are dying out from old age."

Loss of riparian vegetation in the lower reaches of the Carmel River is due to two factors, Davis said. They are the physical destruction of the vegetation by man and lowering of the water table through pumping.

Traffic panel grapples with truck loading issue

The city's Traffic Committee welcomed two new members at its Oct. 8 meeting and scheduled a special meeting for consideration of "major" issues: truck loading hours, one-way streets and an underground parking lot at Sunset Center. The special meeting was held Tuesday, Oct. 20.

The new appointees, both Carmel residents, were named by the City Council to bring the voting strength on the committee up to seven. They are June Wood, long-time activist on traffic issues and Dorothy Lillard, who is also a member of the committee for revision of Carmel's General Plan.

Incumbent voting members of the Traffic Committee are chairman Florence Mason, Arthur Mertens, Richard Murray, Robert Stephenson and Clayton Neill.

City staff members, determined recently by the City Council to have non-voting status, are Asst. City Administrator Jim Bajari, Police Chief Bill Ellis, Public Work Superintendent Bill Askew and Fire Chief Bob Updike.

At the special meeting on Oct. 20 the committee attempted to reach a consensus on recommendations for the General Plan committee. One member was assigned to each of the three topics for research into previous action on the issues and presented the various alternatives to the full committee.

According to chairman Florence Mason, the committee also hopes to follow up with a joint meeting with the members of the General Plan committee for discussion of those and other issues relating to the traffic.

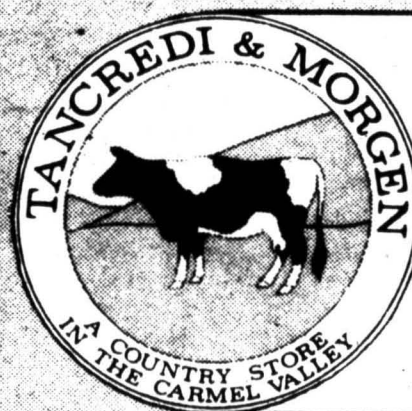

In other action at the Oct. 8 meeting, the Traffic Committee voted 4-2 to take limited action on changes in the intersection at Santa Fe and Third. The vote was to line the curve at the hazardous intersection to provide the best possible turning radius and then re-evaluate the situation in one year's time — or sooner if circumstances warrant.

The limited action was an alternative to removal of a large pine tree, which would have permitted widening the curve.

Parent group will develop drug, alcohol info for high school

PARENTS Who Care, the Carmel area parent support group, plans to develop a drug and alcohol information program at Carmel High School.

The organization's board of directors is to meet Nov. 5 to plan such a program, after a series of three parent workshops focused on the problem of teenage drug and alcohol use.

More than a half-dozen speakers gave suggestions to participants at the last of those workshops Monday at Carmel Middle School.

The basic theme of their messages seemed to be that adolescents need a sense of self-worth and belonging as substitutes for drug involvement.

Linda Nations, a counselor formerly with the Carmel Unified School District, described a youth alternative known as "Neat Family." Neat, she explained, is an acronym for "New experiences, affection and trust."

Through games and group exercises, participants develop a sense of self-worth in a Neat Family, she explained. The whole thing is really "an alternative family support system for kids."

A Neat Family in the school district last year was a huge success, and students were disappointed when it wasn't continued this year, Ms. Nations said.

"Neat Family was started for kids who wanted to be separate," she said. "It worked to build a positive self-image and leadership and to provide an alternative to chemical highs. Acceptance of others' differences also increased."

After a while, teenagers who participated in the Neat Family started enforcing group norms, such as a rule against any drug or alcohol use during the 24-hour period when Neat Family met. There was no pressure or obligation for youngsters to participate, but involvement spread rapidly through word of mouth, she said.

"Peer pressure is here to stay," Ms. Nations told the parent group of about 30. "I don't particularly like it, but we can use it to our advantage. Some of the kids in our group discovered they could get high without drugs."

Ken White, Carmel Unified School District trustee, expressed high hopes for a joint city-school recreation program.

"The City of Carmel has the funds but no facilities. The school district has the facilities but no funds," White said. "The next step is to convince the city to fund a full-time program coordinator."

White said the model for the local program is a city-school cooperative effort in Flint, Mich. which has proven successful. Access to the gym and recreational equipment at Carmel High School would provide an alternative to drugs, he added.

Marcia Smith, a parent volunteer with the Carmel Valley Youth Project, described how that drug diversion program operates. Seventy-five percent of the program participants are youths who have led "transient" lives and who need a sense of belonging, she said.

The Carmel Valley Youth Project is aimed at juveniles who have been involved in burglaries or other drug-related offenses, and enables them to work off restitution in community service, she said.

Jim Kohnke, principal of Carmel Valley High School, told the group that many of the school's 48 students are, or have been, drug users.

"We know what's happening," Kohnke said. "We have very tight controls, but that doesn't mean it's oppressive."

The alternative high school accepts students who have failed in or been expelled from regular schools, and is geared toward development of a sense of responsibility and achievement, Kohnke said.

Ingredients in the Carmel Valley High School program which have made it work include a relaxed environment, emphasis on student responsibility, a caring staff, its small size, and an atmosphere of mutual respect, Kohnke said.

Social dance classes to start next week

Remember the mambo?

No promises, now, but an eight-week dance class that will begin Wednesday, Oct. 28 at Sunset Center, Carmel may return briefly to the chugging rhythms of Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom White.

Or if not the mambo, then the rhumba, or the foxtrot, the tango and the ever-popular polka. Even if your interest in social dancing ended with the turkey trot, you might investigate these classes, which will be given from 2 to 4 p.m.

The sponsors are Sunset Center and Monterey Peninsula College, which will supply the instructor, Deborah White. The fee for the course is the regular college $7 registration fee. Those who have already paid the registration fee for other classes need not pay again.

Hamilton Brown Terrace is dedicated

THE UPPER TERRACE at Sunset Center was officially dedicated Sunday, Oct. 18, as the Hamilton Brown Terrace. City officials and others gathered for a brief ceremony to honor the artist, who died in 1973. The new terrace, which replaces the former one made of asphalt, will eventually be landscaped with native plants. Mayor Barney Lalolo makes a brief speech on a platform which the city hopes some day will hold a major piece of sculpture. (photo by Alan McEwen)

Douds, Farris, Browns gather

Senator William Sharon was not only the founder of Virginia City and the owner of the Palace Hotel in San Francisco and the Bank of California — he was also the founder of a family clan including the Doud, Brown and Farr families of Carmel.

Many of these people are long-time Carmelites, while others hail from various parts of the country. Each year the clan gathers for an annual picnic and this year's event was held this past Sunday at Point 16 (owned by Fred and Dee Farr) about 60 miles down the coast.

Along with all the chicken and salads there was also a serious time as family members planted three Japanese Black Pines in honor of three family members now deceased — Florence Sharon Brown, Hamilton Brown and Mrs. Hazel Sharon.

Then on Sunday, the members along with city officials gathered for the dedication of the Hamilton Brown Terrace at Sunset Center. Hamilton was an architect and artist who retired to Carmel, where he died in 1973.

Hamilton's cousin, Fred Farr, was master of ceremonies at the dedication. The memorial was initiated by the artist's former wife, Mrs. Tom Work, who donated $10,000 to start the project.

Following the dedication, Fred and Dee hosted about 50 family members to a luncheon at their home. Guests included Christopher and Susie Brown of Palm Beach, Fla., and Peter and Barbara Brown of Philadelphia.

Then, on Monday, family members met at the LaPlaya Hotel for another big luncheon and a business meeting regarding their family-owned Sharlands Corp. and Columbia Channell Gold Mine Inc.

It may take years to discover just exactly who's who in this large family but according to Dee they're all related in one way or another — some by birth and some by marriage.

Hamilton's brother, Bill Brown of Carmel Valley, said that it's impossible to keep up with the family because it keeps growing. "There's no doubt that we'll be welcoming new additions to the family at next year's picnic," he said.

Did they have a good time? So much so that it's probably still going on!

Wine tasting, auction, dinner for Sta. Catalina

If names such as Concannon, Firestone, Mirassou, Monterey Vineyards, Stony Ridge and Wente Bros. pique your interest, plan to attend the First Central Coast Wine Tasting and Wine Auction Saturday, Oct. 24 at Santa Catalina School, Mark Thomas Drive, Monterey.

David Armansco of Durney Vineyards of Carmel Valley will be master of ceremonies for the event, which will benefit the school's scholarship fund.

The charge for the wine tasting, which flows from 4 to 6 p.m., and for the auction, from 6 to 7 p.m., is $15.

But that's only the beginning. Should you have an appreciation for gourmet food and a wallet to match, stay for the 8-p.m. dinner, which costs $125, including more wine. By candlelight, you will dine on Consomme Orientale, Filet Bearnaise, Tomates Duxelles, Profiteroles a la Creme and other delights.

For more information or dinner reservations, phone 649-1432.

Doctors gather at Doubletree for refresher

More than 150 doctors are expected to gather at Monterey's Doubletree Inn today, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 22-24, for the California Medical Association's 31st Annual Regional Postgraduate Institute.

The doctors will attend workshops and lectures about such subjects as poisoning, strokes, venereal disease, skin problems, and other maladies.

For some of the attending physicians, the Institute is a way of fulfilling medical license requirements that specify a certain amount of post-doctorate education each year. The Institute, however, existed long before the requirement did.

Planners to reconsider application for restaurant

The Carmel Board of Adjustments is scheduled to reconsider its denial of a use permit to Kati and Alan Lewis for a restaurant in the old Dolores Pharmacy building Wednesday, Oct. 28.

The Lewis use permit application was returned to the Board of Adjustments by the City Council Oct. 5 after the council heard an appeal from the Lewises.

Specifically, the council indicated by a 3-2 vote that additional consideration should be given to water use factors before the matter is decided.

Original denial of the use permit came in an Aug. 26 Board of Adjustments action, which followed council passage Aug. 3 of a moratorium on most new commercial uses.

The Lewises filed their application for a use permit July 31, just before passage of the urgency moratorium ordinance. On Aug. 4, Planning Director Bob Griggs offered to refund the $50 filing fee if the Lewises withdrew their application.

However, the Lewises decided not to withdraw their application and the filing fee was not refunded.

Immediately after the Board of Adjustments meets at 4 p.m., it will convene as the planning commission for a study session on time sharing. The commission has gathered information on time sharing — or short-term property rental — in other communities.

The commission wants to develop an ordinance to regulate the use of time-sharing housing units in Carmel.

New CV Council meets Oct. 31

The Carmel Valley Council — a loosely-knit alliance of property owner associations — will meet over breakfast at 8:30 a.m., Saturday, Oct. 31 at the Carmel Holiday Inn.

Speakers scheduled to address the group include Hal Boudreau, outgoing manager of the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency, and Dave Meyers, manager of the Monterey Peninsula Garbage and Refuse Disposal District.

Some of the member organizations in the Carmel Valley Council are the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, Carmel Views Property Owners Association, Carmel Vista Property Owners Association, Valley Greens Property Owners Association, and the Carmel Knolls Property Owners Association.

Padre Parents hear principal

Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading reported a large turnout and success of the recent Back To School Night and the school dances at the monthly meeting of the board of Carmel High Padre Parents, Thursday Oct. 15 at the home of Mrs. and Mrs. John Crivello in Carmel Valley.

President Wendy Banks announced that the "American Living History Theater" that was to be presented in October was postponed until January. The potluck dinner for the History and English departments which was to be held in conjunction with the performances would be scheduled as planned.

The annual Run For Funds, sponsored by the boosters club, will be held on April 18, 1982. The Padre Parents will assist in this fun event.

Discussion was held and plans made for the Candidates Night Oct. 26 at Carmel Middle School Library. The board will sponsor the event with other school parent faculty boards assisting.

Members were urged to encourage all members of the community to attend.

The next meeting of the Padre Parents Board will be held at the home of Susi Wagstaff, Nov. 12.

THE PARADE included this "Proposition 13 Ladder Truck" from Moss Landing with its message about funding cutbacks.

A CROWD OF 1,000 people enjoyed the second annual "Muster-by-the-Sea" at Sunset Center last Sunday, Oct. 18. Ten local fire departments participated in the parade and afternoon of games, which included a hose cart race, a bucket brigade race, a make and break contest, and a water polo game. The muster was hosted by the Carmel Volunteer Fire Department with the assistance of many Carmel merchants. Firefighters from the Monterey Peninsula Airport came out with most overall points.

FIREFIGHTERS don't have to use bucket brigades any more, but this event at the muster was fun and not especially easy as buckets passed up the line in a blur. The team from the Castroville Volunteer Fire Department proved to be the most adept and came in first. (photo by Alan McEwen)

THE HIT of the parade down Ocean Avenue which preceded the muster was this miniature radio-controlled truck which darted around under the control of firefighter Chuck August. (photo by Alan McEwen)

The candidates' night is sponsored by the Carmel High School Padre Parents and is open to the public.

Candidates for two, four-year terms on the Board of Education are incumbent Doyle Clayton, Lynn Brooks, Joan Cathey, William Sanford, and C. Jonathan Shoemaker.

Council to look at plans to remodel City Hall

THE CARMEL City Council will take a look at plans to remodel City Hall when it meets today (Oct. 22).

The council is to meet in executive session at 3:30 p.m. in City Hall to discuss litigation, and then will go on a field trip to inspect Robert Pettit's property at Monte Verde and Second.

Pettit has asked for permission to construct a retaining wall adjacent to his property and partially located on city property.

When it returns to City Hall, the council will view drawings for a proposed $65,000 remodeling of city offices, to include the addition of 576 sq. ft. of additional space.

Finance Director Jim Bajari said funds have been budgeted for the work, but the council must give conceptual approval to the plans before bids are sought.

"The main objective of the remodeling is to get a more efficient work flow pattern so work can be more easily accomplished," Bajari said.

The present arrangement of office space is not conducive to efficiency, and there is an overall shortage of space, Bajari indicated.

Much of the work will involve rearrangement of present City Hall space into different work areas, through removal of walls and creation of new offices and work areas.

In addition, 576 sq. ft. of new space will be added on the south side of City Hall to provide larger offices for the building inspector and planning director, if the council approves the plans.

Through a different use of space, a mayor's conference room and meeting room will be created, and additional windows will be installed on the north side for light and ventilation, Bajari said.

"What this plan would do is bring us from a 1950s work environment to a 1970s work environment," Bajari said. "It allows a certain amount of additional use, but it doesn't look forward to future needs."

As an example of current City Hall conditions, Bajari cited his own office, which has inadequate lighting, no windows and no ventilation. Planning Director Bob Griggs, for instance, has an office which measures about seven by five feet.

Many of the files and records regularly used by the city clerk's office are stored on the other side of City Hall, which necessitates many back-and-forth trips, Bajari said.

The preliminary drawings were done without charge to the city by Carmel designer Alan Williams. A total of $50,000 has been budgeted for contractual work for the remodeling, and another $15,000 for materials.

Bajari estimated the work would take about one month to complete and probably would start near the end of December.

In other business, the council will consider a resolution which would urge the Department of Defense to continue full strength of the 7th Division at Fort Ord.

The council will also consider approval of an agreement with California-American Water Co. for uniform fire hydrant service in Carmel.

Father Farrell's wisdom

*Takes time to get
Lord's attention*

*Invocation to the Carmel Rotary Club
Sept. 2, 1981*

Oh almighty and eternal God, bless the chicken pinfeathers and the vino blanco purchased out of the generous purse of Mozart, Hart and Wagner.

Last week a visiting Rotarian from Palm Springs informed us that the Carmel Club had established a world's record: an invocation that lasted for all of three minutes by his stop-watch.

Palm Springs was made an Indian reservation to get rid of the troublesome San Bernardino Indians. They now own land that once was unwanted and they have been scalping white men who speak with forked tongues.

Our Rotary guest does not realize that it takes at least two-and-one-half minutes to get the Lord's attention when there is a scalped Palm Springs inhabitant in the congregation.

Presuming he has returned to his desert ghetto, we pray a "quickie" for all of us north of the Tehachapis.

Selfishness: "A man who lives for himself, is engaged in a very small business and he is sending a small boy to the market."

Unselfishness: "A man who forgets himself, does things that are remembered."

Oh Lord, help us to rid our lives of selfishness and grant us the grace to be unselfish in all our actions.

Finally, Robert Henri, the American artist who founded the Ashcan school wrote: "There are mighty few people who think what they think, they think."

And Calvin Coolidge whispered, "I have never been hurt by anything I didn't say." Amen.

CARMEL'S OPPORTUNITY

Tomorrow a majority of the voters of Carmel will render an important decision affecting the future of the town. Much will depend upon this first strictly municipal election.

A majority for incorporation will mean that the people of this community are willing and eager to take upon themselves the obligations and responsibilities of organized and efficient city government.

It will mean that the people themselves will take into their own hands the laying out of streets, the making of adequate provision for fire and police protection, the annexing of additional territory, and the expenditure of their own tax money.

This incorporation plan can be carried through if every true lover of Carmel will embrace the opportunity to vote tomorrow.

LOCAL GROCERS ASK COUNCIL FOR CLOSING OF STORES ON SUNDAYS

To close or not to close was the question the city council was asked to decide at a special meeting called for that purpose Wednesday night when representatives of five groceries requested an ordinance regulating the closing of stores on Sundays and holidays.

As spokesman of the group, E.H. Ewig explained to the council, "We understand that a drive-in market scheduled to remain open on Sundays, holidays and at all hours of the day is to open a place here. This type of a store takes money out of the city and would result in forcing all of us to keep our stores open in order that we may obtain the same revenue we have been getting. An ordinance ordering the closing of groceries on Sundays and holidays would be a great help toward keeping out this unfair type of competition."

Two petitions are now in the hands of the council. The petition asking for the ordinance has 430 signatures while the other, opposing the ordinance has 276 signatures. The matter will probably be decided at the next meeting of the city council.

PLANNERS FLOODED WITH COMMERCIAL BUILDING PERMITS

The Planning Commission yesterday studied plans for three new offices, 11 stores, and 21 apartments as to land use, off street parking and architecture. They granted building permits for two of these stores, three offices and one apartment and held over the other applications until October 31 for further study.

James R. Belvail received permission to build an addition of three offices and one apartment to his existing building on the west side of Junipero Street, immediately south of the Forge in the Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. G.H. Linsley may move away the residence on the west side of Dolores Street, and build two stores on the site.

Dorothy Schultz applied for a permit to build a 12 apartment-seven store building on the Junipero Street site previously occupied by the Bettie Greene Stables. The Schultz building, center of the recent Planning Commission — City Council land use dispute, is reduced in size by two apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Healey wish to add eight units and two stores to Town House at the northwest corner of San Carlos and Fifth Streets. The Planning Commission asked the Healeys to return on Oct. 31.

CARMEL FILM MAKERS TAKE PART IN SHAH'S CELEBRATION

Two bright young Carmelites, Jim Sweeney and Reza Garib, an Iranian, were an integral part of the filming of the documentary titled "Persia, 2500."

Reza conceived the idea for the film which began as a modest project, Jim says, but grew over a period of two years into a very extensive motion picture venture. It was produced by Sidney Frohman of Frohman Productions, Monterey. Reza was director of photography.

Jim, who is only, 22, and a bright, young movie prospect, served as associate producer.

Jim's job as associate producer, he said, involved "liaison works between the film company and the Iranian government ... I had to negotiate with the lawyers there, and on the U.S. side, had to deal with the musicians and unions."

Apparently, the Shah wasn't taking any chances with the impressions the Americans might get during the filming. They were guests of the government at the posh Royal Teheran Hilton, and furnished with new cars and drivers.

"The government wouldn't allow us to live like the natives," Jim muses. "I've got a bunch of Royal Iranian caviar, which is better than the best caviar you can get here in the finest restaurants."

96 DONATE BLOOD

Practically all the old timers were there, plus the volunteer workers and some children when the American Red Cross Bloodmobile from San Jose appeared for the 26th visit at Community Center in Carmel Valley on Thursday, October 21. Friends were greeted and new ones were made as they went through the processing stage of records, blood pressure, and temperature taking. This congenial group has been getting together twice yearly ever since. The organizational representatives of most of the Valley's businesses met 12 years ago and recruited 90 donors.

People don't just magically appear at these drawings; the groundwork was laid when Mrs. T. B. McKiernon, Blood Program chairman and recruiter for the Valley, consulted with Mrs. Saul Weingarten, Blood Program chairman from Carmel, and Mrs. Catherine Harriman, chairman of the Blood Program scheduling. Only then, after more discussions were the wheels starting to turn to make the blood drawing a success.

RESIDENTS TOUR THEIR FOREST

During the past weekend, approximately one hundred residents of Del Monte Forest joined their neighbors for guided walking tours through various regions of the Forest which are included in the new development plan. The printed plan was received in the homes of the residents a few days earlier and the walking tours were designed to acquaint the people with the areas to be developed and those to be preserved in their natural state.

Hal and Peg Titus conducted the first walk through the Huckleberry Hill and Pescadero tract. Frances Larkey took her group on a riding-walking tour of the Middle Fork and Spyglass area. Probably the largest group of walkers joined Chet Gadaire and Carl Fulton at Spanish Bay. The final group was conducted by Rudd Crawford through the Gowan Cypress area.

REVISED PLAN CAUSES DEBATE

The Carmel Valley Ranch Plan — this time in a revised form — is once more the subject of hot debate, but now much of the objection to this project centers around its relationship with a scheduled new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Although the results of the county planning commission's public hearing on the ranch plan were not available at press time, the golf and residential development of the old Holt Ranch is likely to remain an issue as discussion of an overall Valley master plan begins this November.

Famed actress Anne Baxter will appear in Carmel Nov. 1.

Anne Baxter's fairy tales

By MICHAEL B. SMITH

At a time of life when most people are looking toward retirement, Anne Baxter is riding gaily off in all directions, acting, writing and otherwise exercising her special gifts of beauty, brains and talent.

After making 49 movies in 41 years, she'd like nothing better than to make another movie "if a good script comes along."

And after starring in innumerable stage plays and television dramas, Miss Baxter is now on the road with her own show.

Fairy Tales Are Not Just for Children is a one-woman "lecture-entertainment," a kaleidoscopic look at the life of one of the great stars of a disappearing era. Miss Baxter has taken the show to Connecticut (where she lives), Missouri, Arizona and other far-flung places, and Nov. 1 she takes it to Sunset Center in Carmel. Tickets for the 8 p.m. performance are $10.

Fairy Tales is "a very startling fairy tale kind of sketch," she says. "It's about a private woman and a public fairy tale — the making of an actress. It comes complete with ogres, goblins, princes and everything else. There were quite a few good fairies along the way."

While Miss Baxter will present an insider's view of a movie star's life, don't expect the performance to be a chapter from True Confessions. When she talks about herself, the actress always keeps in mind a French proverb that goes "Always the truth, nothing but the truth, never all the truth."

Not everyone remembers that Anne Baxter broke into the movies at the tender age of 15 — the same age Brooke Shields first smiled for the cameras.

"I am not like Brooke Shields," she says modestly. "I was never a gorgeous creature."

She was pretty gorgeous. Miss Baxter grew up with Linda Darnell, Roddy McDowall, and, of course, Mickey and Judy, making such pictures as The Magnificent Ambersons, All About Eve and the Academy Award-winning The Razor's Edge. On the stage, she starred with Raymond Massie and Tyrone Power in John Brown's Body, and with Noel Coward in Two Keys.

Miss Baxter has not been the typical Hollywood star, lolling on satin sheets between films. With her second husband, Randolph Galt, she moved to a 37,000-acre cattle ranch in Australia and spent four years raising beef, baking bread on a wood stove and wrestling a Land Rover over corrugated Australian roads. She still travels, and enjoys the differences in places and people she encounters.

"I am struck by the fantastic differences in this country. We are a rainbow people, every color of the rainbow."

Miss Baxter has played opposite many Hollywood stars, including Ronald Reagan. "He was just as political then as he is now," she says. "I used to kid him about bringing too soap boxes on the set. One wasn't enough."

While in Carmel, Miss Baxter will visit the Wellington Henderson residence on Scenic road for a look at the famed Butterfly House, designed by her grandfather, Frank Lloyd Wright.

For more information about the performance, phone 624-3996.

Artist Delacroix here Saturday

Renowned French primitive artist Michel Delacroix will bring a new collection of his charming oils, watercolors and lithographs to the Atelier Galerie Saturday, Oct. 24.

A reception for the artist will be held at Atelier Galerie, Dolores and Sixth in Carmel, from 3 to 6 p.m. The public is invited.

Delacroix, who will fly from the East Coast to attend the Atelier show and the Expo Cal Exhibition in San Francisco, will sign a limited number of posters at Saturday's Carmel reception.

When an artist is identified as "primitive" one immediately thinks of one-dimensional country scenes that may be colorful and pretty, but lack real painterly skill. This is the Grandma Moses school of primitive painting.

Delacroix's work, on the other hand, is as sophisticated as Paris, the city that is his favorite subject. It has color in abundance, but it also incorporates fine draftsmanship, subtle perspective and even humor. A Delacroix painting cannot be quickly scanned if you want to see what it is about.

For Delacroix has embarked on a one-man campaign to save the spirit of Paris, which today, as with so many other cities, is being cast in the shadow of the high-rise monolith.

His paintings and drawings dwell on a Paris that lived between the turn of the century and the end of World War I. They capture not only the lines of the buildings and the costumes of the people, but the civilized gaiety of the city itself.

Taken individually, the paintings are marvelous; taken together, they constitute a magnificent record of another time. In that sense, Delacroix's primitivism is closer to reality than a mere photograph could ever be.

The artist was born in Paris in 1933 and has had numerous one-man shows in this country and Europe, including a 1977 exhibit in Carmel. He has won many awards for his paintings, including the 1973 Prix Publique.

For more information phone 624-1900.

Seaside launches first U.N. Parade

The City of Seaside, having abandoned the Fourth of July as an uncomfortably crowded holiday, will hold its First Annual United Nations Day Parade Saturday, Oct. 24 at 11 a.m.

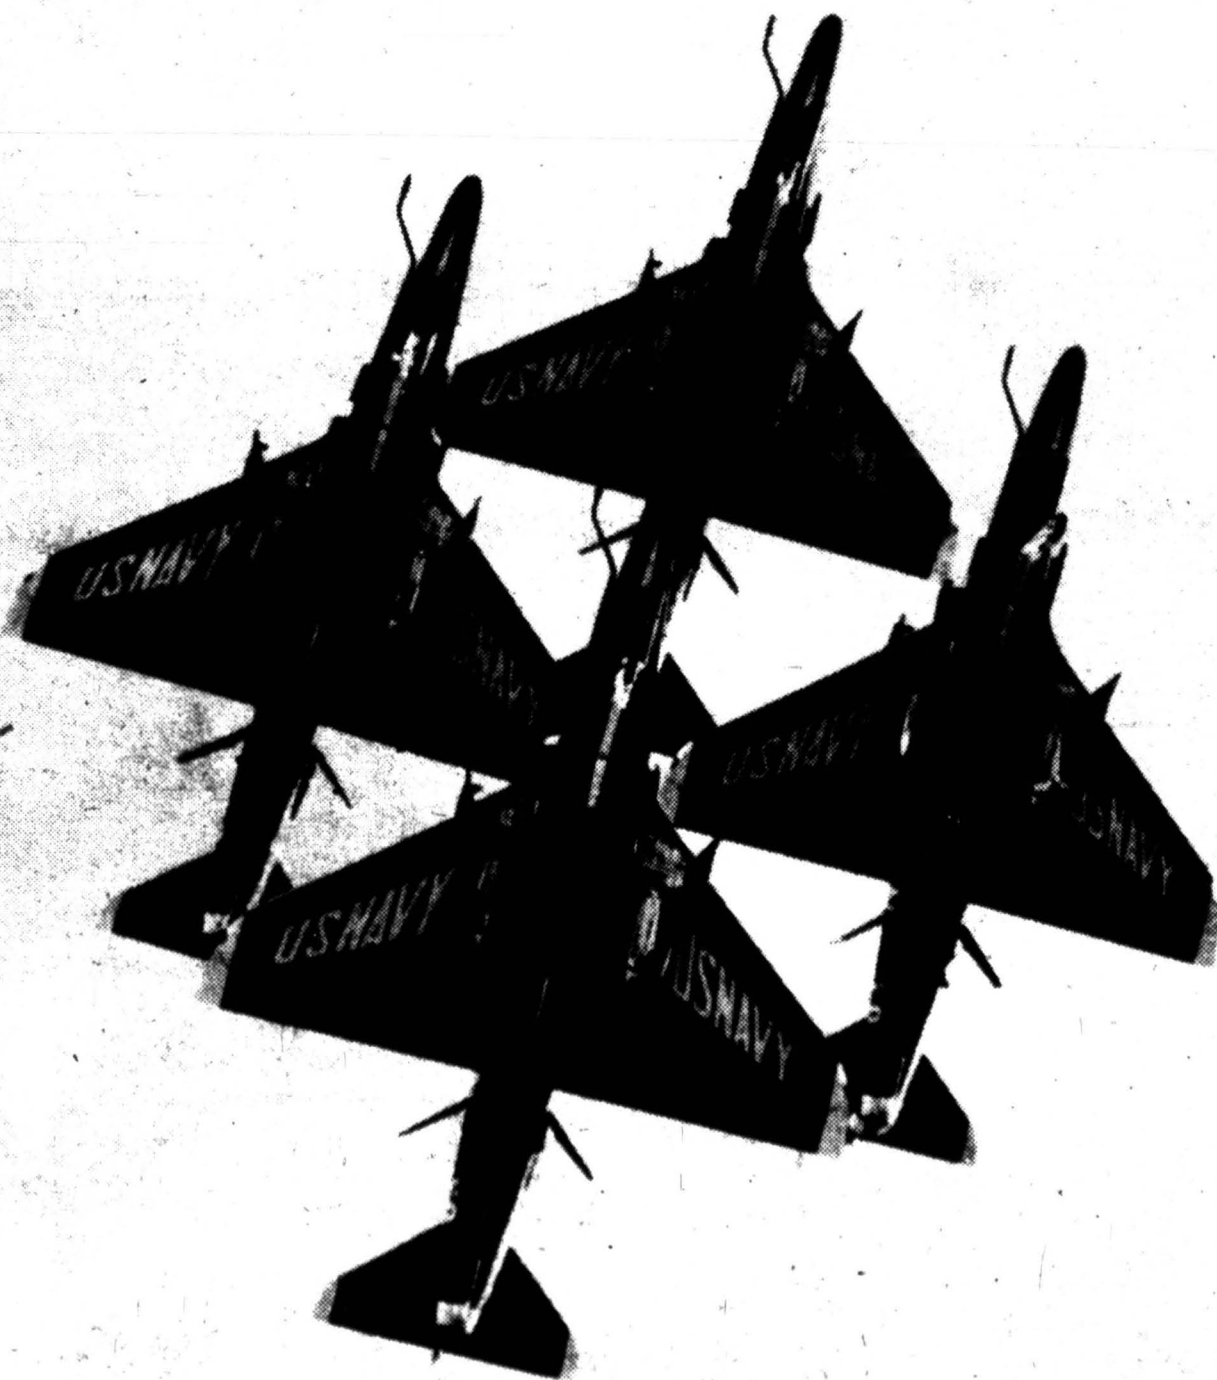

The parade route begins at Echo and Fremont and proceeds down Fremont to Hilby. More than a dozen bands, led by the Seaside High Spartan Band, will march in the parade. There will be floats, a color guard from Ft. Ord and police and fire equipment from all over.

The day starts at 6 a.m. with a Pancake Breakfast at Oldemeyer Center, 986 Hilby, for which the Seaside Lions Club will charge $2. The last pancake will be flipped at 11 a.m., just in time for the parade.

At 9 a.m. Seaside merchants will hold a sidewalk sale in the street in front of Oldemeyer Center. From 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. there will be a free entertainment program, again at Oldemeyer Center.

For more information phone 394-8531.

Airshow debuts Saturday in Salinas

HOW DO THEY DO THAT?: The Navy's Blue Angels perform a clearly impossible maneuver at hundreds of miles an hour and thousands of feet above the ground, their airplanes seemingly locked together like a child's glued toy. The Angels and many other airborne acrobats will dare the devil Saturday, Oct. 24 and Sunday, Oct. 25 at The California International Airshow, Salinas Municipal Airport.

More than 80,000 spectators are expected to get all stiff-necked and squinty-eyed Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 24 and 25, as they thrill to the skill of some of the best flyers in the world at the California International Airshow in Salinas.

The Blue Angels, the Navy's crack team of precision pilots, are the show's starring act, but the Canadian Reds — a team of former Royal Canadian Air Force pilots — may give them tough competition.

Then there is the French Connection, a pair of hommes braves who present one of the most exciting dual formation acts on either side of the Atlantic.

The Stardusters don't need an airplane to do their aerial stunts. They're a team of six women parachute jumpers who have more than 6,000 jumps among them. Bob Hoover, a Rockwell International Test Pilot, and famed stunt pilot Art Scholl will also perform.

As if all the activity in the air weren't enough, there will also be ground exhibits including a demonstration of radio-controlled aircraft, military displays and exhibits from NASA's Ames Research Center.

The Blue Angels are scheduled to arrive at Salinas Airport today. "Fat Albert," their Lockheed C-130 transport plane, lands first at 1:30 p.m. Then the Angels themselves swoop out of the sky at 2 p.m. and will perform a 15-minute demonstration before they touch down.

Advance tickets for the Airshow, available at Ticketron outlets, are $7 for bleacher seats, $4 for adults, and $2 for children six to 12.

Children under six are free. These are single-day tickets. You must purchase two tickets to attend both days. Tickets purchased at the airfield will be $1 extra.

To get to Salinas Municipal Airport, take U.S. 101 to the Airport Ave. exit south of Salinas. For more information phone 1-424-7611.

Film review:

True Digressions

By LISA JENSEN

ANY MOVIE with the good sense to co-star Robert DeNiro and Robert Duvall should be worth seeing for at least two reasons. But, unfortunately, DeNiro and Duvall are the only reasons to see True Confessions, a muddled forties melodrama adapted from the John Gregory Dunne novel by Dunne and Joan Didion.

The sight of DeNiro and Duvall, two consummate and gifted pros, sparring with and challenging each other in two or three key scenes is almost worth the price of admission. In fact, the acting is first-rate throughout, but actors aren't magicians; they can't materialize a complete movie out of nothing. What True Confessions desperately needs is a solid story and the filmmaking chutzpah to put it over, which Ulu Grosbard's oddly distended direction fails to do.

DeNiro plays Monsignor Des Spellacy, an ambitious young priest in the Catholic archdiocese of L.A. A shrewd diplomat with an acute business sense, Des is now the right-hand man to the aging but strong-willed Cardinal (Cyril Cusack). Des's duties include everything from transferring a feisty old priest (Burgess Meredith) who refuses to "take orders" to arranging business deals with wealthy Jack Amsterdam (Charles Durning), a corrupt building contractor who wants to get in good with the church before he dies of cancer.

Duvall plays Tom Spellacy, the monsignor's older brother, a streetwise, cheerfully seedy police detective. The brothers are friendly and respect each other, though they don't have the time to become genuinely close. But when Tom's investigation into the grisly murder of a pretty call girl begins to implicate church benefactor Amsterdam in a web of sexual and political scandal, both brothers are swept up in a fateful series of moral and professional crises.

Dunne and Didion have tried to make the film into a kind of Irish Catholic version of Chinatown, from the period L.A. setting (most of the story is told in a flashback to 1948) to the motif of the brash detective uncovering corruption in high places. But the notion that money and power are corrupting influences in both the church and big business is hardly news, and there's nothing fresh in the writers' approach here.

The mystery plotting, in particular, lacks the jigsaw-puzzle precision of Chinatown. (It's never clear, for instance, how or why Tom intends to nail Amsterdam for a specific murder we all know he didn't commit, or whether the cop's ploy is successful.) And Grosbard's story-telling style is unbearably protracted. We're way ahead of the script at every turn, yet Grosbard drags things out with "filler" digressions meant to illustrate the characters' inner turmoil. There are too many shots of Tom skulking aimlessly through the streets or brooding at his desk, while a long sequence of the troubled Des returning home after a golf game has no purpose or payoff.

Ironically, DeNiro can express more in a sidelong glance, and Duvall with his chronic dry chuckle, than all of these meandering "mood" sequences put together. When they meet face-to-face on business or over lunch at a posh restaurant, the film is jolted temporarily to life. (Often despite Grosbard's interference: A crisp conversation between the brothers in Des's office is almost destroyed by Grosbard's distracting decision to cut back and forth from head to head with each sentence. The actors aren't allowed to appear in the same frame until the end of the scene.)

Unfortunately, even in the film's best moments, it's not the Spellacy brothers who capture our imagination. Rather it's DeNiro and Duvall playing so skillfully off each other with such wit, grace and infectious relish. That we consistently pay more attention to the acting than the story underscores True Confessions' crucial lack of dramatic substance.

Sunset Views

*A great lady
comes to town*

By RICHARD TYLER

On Sunday, Nov. 1, at 8 p.m., a very special event will take place when Anne Baxter comes to the Sunset Theater with her multi-media show entitled, "Fairy Tales are Not Just for Children."

Anne Baxter collects challenges like some women collect diamonds. She took her first challenge at the age of eleven. Anne had just told her family she wanted to be an actress. They replied, "It's up to you and we'll help you." She promptly enrolled in the New York school headed by the redoubtable Maria Ouspenskaya, the youngest pupil ever accepted by this famous ogress of drama.

At 13, she stepped onto a Broadway stage for the first time. Since then she has been seen and heard in many lands and on many stages; on screens both large and small; and in the doing, has gathered unto herself a vast, admiring audience; an Oscar for The Razor's Edge; and a nomination for another film, All About Eve, in which she played the title role.

In mid 1971, the one-time "Eve" found herself playing the reverse role of the older actress, Margo Channing, in Broadway's hit musical, Applause. Anne's dazzling success in this production proved that she is equal to any challenge the theater may toss at her for in addition to the dramatic demands of the part, she had 23 days in which to learn the songs and dances to take over from another illustrious actress, Lauren Bacall.

David Selznick, testing for the title role of Rebecca, told her that her performance was brilliant but that she was much too young for the role. Back in New York another tycoon of that era, Darryl Zanuck, saw another screen test and immediately signed the 15-year-old to a long-term contract at 20th Century Fox.

One prominent New York critic wrote: "Miss Baxter has never given a bad performance and perhaps she doesn't intend to." It was at 20th Century Fox that she won an Academy Award for the year's best supporting actress in the bitter sweet role of Sophie of Razor's Edge, an American girl in Paris, tormented by tragedy into the tragedy of drink. Four years later she was nominated for her portrayal of "Eve." It is now legend that she and Bette Davis (Margo Channing of the film) cancelled each other out in the voting.

Interspersed were other standout performances attesting to her versatility — the peppery tomboy of Yellow Sky, a jazzy flapper in You're My Everything, a valiant woman lawyer in The Walls of Jericho.

After leaving 20th Century Fox, Anne starred in films for all of the major studios, both in Hollywood and on foreign lands. Carnival Story was made in the midst of Munich's ruins; Chase a Crooked Shadow on Spain's Costa Brava. During this time, she returned to the stage three times. First, a five month's tour of America in John Brown's Body with Tyrone Power and Raymond Massey; then to Broadway in The Square Root of Wonderful, and then to London in The Joshua Tree.

Most prophetic of the film locations was Australia where she made Summer of the Seventeenth Doll, a keen edged, gutsy story which was orphaned by distributors leery of its Australian accents.

Back in the States, she met Randolph Galt, an American who had invested in a 37,000 acre cattle station 80 miles north of Sydney in the Australian bush. They were married and left for Australia soon after she completed Cimarron for MGM. The move to Australia, 8,000 miles from friends, agents, proffered movie scripts, and a luxurious way of life, was in its way a wild "I Dare You." The vision of the soignée Miss Baxter baking bread on a wood-burning stove, sharing a telephone of sorts with 14 other participants, and being a chore, char, and mop queen still evokes polite disbelief in Hollywood. However, you have her word and that of the Australian press that she did it all. She did return to do a film, Walk on the Wild Side, in Hollywood during that time.

Returning permanently to these shores, Anne spearheaded what has become the current-trek of famous film personalities toward television. Although she has refused the offers of several series, she has guest starred on all the important television shows including a number of feature length World Premieres and Movies of the Week. Just before going to New York to star in Applause, she appeared with Jimmy Stewart and George Kennedy in the film, Fool's Parade, playing the role of a riverboat madam of the 1930's.

This actress is a dynamo — but first of all, she is a woman, very warm, vivid, and feminine. She is a star — but since she suspects that "Movie Star" is a short-lived epithet, all she says on that score is, "I am an actress."

This actress, Anne Baxter, will appear in one performance as part of the Lively Arts Series at Sunset Theater. Reserved seating is available. Call the director's office at Sunset Center for information or to reserve tickets: 624-3996.

MAGICIAN CHARLES AMARAL, center, doesn't look too unhappy for someone who is about to be trussed, shackled and locked in a trunk. Amaral and his associates, Kathleen Amaral and Chris Nolting, will amaze and astonish those who attend their evening of magic at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 28 at Sunset Theater.

An evening of magic Wednesday

Charles and Company, a trio of young magicians who have thrilled audiences from San Francisco to Las Vegas, appear at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 28 at Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Their evening of magic is a benefit for the 100 club, a group involved in charitable activity. Tickets are $4 per person, and there is a special rate of $12 for groups of up to six persons or entire families. Advance tickets are available at Bartlett Music, Fifth and Dolores, Carmel.

Charles and Company consists of Charles Amaral, his wife Kathleen and Chris Nolting, with occasional help from other ghosts and spirits that happen to be in the neighborhood. Besides practicing magic, Charles Amaral also has a studio of magic in San Leandro.

The tricks themselves will be some of the greatest feats of legerdemain since the heyday of Houdini. There will be a vanishing dove, Chinese linking rings, a floating chrome ball and a handkerchief that turns into a real live girl! There will be levitation, prestidigitation and other marvels too wonderful to mention! For more information phone 394-3717.

Children's tumbling offered at Sunset

Tumbling programs for children ages three months through 12 years of age will be offered as part of the Carmel recreation program at Sunset Center. A parent and child program will be offered on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 to 11 a.m. starting the first week in November.

This program is designed for the infant or young child ages three months through five years and his mother, father, or a wonderful substitute — grandmother or friend. Warm-up exercises followed by supervised instruction in basic movements are designed specifically for the child's age. Emphasis will be placed on instructing parents on safety and proper methods of control. Creative yoga exercises for children in which they pretend to be animals will be used.

On Mondays and Wednesdays from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., the program will be for children from six through 12 years of age. Many of the exercises in this course will serve as pre-training for gymnastics.

Instructor Martha Gleason has worked closely with Hiroshi Fujimoto, who is now the owner/head coach at Monterey Gymnastics Center. She worked privately with him and assists him in his MPC Children's Program. She has supervised nursery school classes in health, art, and playtime. Her interests lie in helping children build their abilities and potential in coordination, poise and confidence through tumbling.

Pre-registration is necessary. Both classes begin the first week of November. The fee is $2 per class. Registration may be made by phoning the director's office at Sunset Center, 624-3996.

The myth of the mongrel

By JUDITH A. EISNER

SOME OF the most tenacious myths that exist in our culture are those that pertain to dogs — purebreds versus mongrels. Just as people will continue — probably into eternity — to insist that "garlic cures worms," so, too, will they continue to cling to strange beliefs about dog breeds.

Whenever a discussion begins between the owner of a non-purebred and the owner of a recognizable breed, you're sure to hear something like, "Everyone knows that mutts are stronger than pedigreed dogs," or "mutts are smarter," or "mutts have better temperaments."

Which is all sheer nonsense. You will find some mongrels that are stronger, smarter and better-tempered than some purebreds, of course. A 65-pound mongrel is sure to be stronger than a six-pound Chihuahua. But to make sweeping statements in favor of mutts that denude all purebreds is absurd.

One of the main reasons people choose to own a purebred dog is that they like the way a certain dog looks and acts and want to have one like it. If that certain dog happens to be a Bulldog, the only way they're going to match some of its traits is by getting another Bulldog.

Predicting what a mongrel puppy is going to look like when it matures is probably tougher than picking a winner at the horse races. There's an old adage about all puppies being cute, and it's true. But cute little fluffy brownish mongrel puppies have a distressing way of growing up to be ugly, huge, wire-haired, brownish mongrel dogs.

And because the breeding of mongrels is most often a haphazard affair, there is no size or type control. Big dogs and little ones breed, short-coated and long-haired, black, white, yellow, brown and everything in between gets mixed together. In short, the genetic pool of mongrels is infinite in its potential, while the genetic material is purebreds is more restricted to predictable, inheritable characteristics.

That's why you hear of unhappy people having to give up their dog because it wouldn't "stop growing." The small mongrel pup has a way of surprising its owners and turning into a giant. But the purebred, whatever its breed, is going to reach a certain size and weight — with minor variations — and that's it. No purebred Cocker Spaniel will ever weigh 75 pounds or stand 28 inches at the shoulder. And you can bet on it.

WITH MONGRELS, you cannot predict what the dog's characteristics will be when it matures. No one can say whether the dog will have a hunting instinct, a herding instinct, a guarding instinct, or a fighting instinct. It may have all of these — or none.

If you want a hunting dog — one that will locate and hold and flush and retrieve upland game birds, for example, you know, when you buy a Setter or Pointer of good, proven hunting stock, that with proper training, you will end up with a dependable gun dog. With a mutt, you have no way of knowing what you'll get.

One of the myths about mutts is that they're stronger, both physically and temperamentally, than purebreds. This belief goes hand in hand with the idea that all purebred dogs are nervous, shaky, hysterical or just plumb crazy, and physically, more prone to exotic illnesses than non-purebred dogs.

The basis for this belief no doubt lies in the fact that people who own purebreds, partially because they have a monetary investment in their dog, are more likely to inoculate against preventable diseases lest they lose their dog to one.

UNDENIABLY, there have been over the years, and still are, badly bred purebreds who are nervous, hysterical and just plumb crazy. This is due to careless and thoughtless overbreeding. But by far the majority of purebreds are as calm, stable and dependable as one could wish.

In selecting a purebred, you have a good idea, before you take the dog home, what his temperament is going to be like. If you want a calm, kind of lazy dog, you'd do better with a St. Bernard or a Bassett, perhaps; if you want an up-and-at-'em type, select a ready-to-go terrier; if you want a watchdog, there are breeds known and bred for this ability.

If the myths that persist about purebreds were true, then all the agencies that utilize dogs would be better off avoiding them and using mongrels. Yet the organizations that train dogs for the blind use purebreds; police departments around the world that use dogs choose only purebreds; the Army and Marines use purebreds.

Were these dogs to be weak, nervous or stupid, they would never be entrusted to perform the work they do. But over the years they — and hundreds of thousands of other purebred dogs — have proven their worth as hunters, haulers, guards, herders, trackers, and all-around good companions. It's time the myths were laid to rest.

Backgammon

Beware of a gammon

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, are to roll in the diagrammed position. Should you double? If you do, should Black accept the double, or should he resign?

You have an excellent double. In about two-thirds of the possible rolls you will hit the blot on your 4-point and make the point; and several other rolls are almost as good for you. Even if you merely safety the two blots in your outer board you will be satisfied (although disappointed) since you are well ahead in the race. You are a strong favorite to win this game.

Black should not accept the double even though he would give you a very bad time if he managed to hit a blot. If you manage to hit his blot and make the 4-point, you may shut him out of your board altogether. Black must reckon with the chance of being gammoned.

A good rule in such situations is: Don't make a doubtful take of a double if there is a fair chance that you will be gammoned.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

BLACK-CLAD DANCERS of The Monterey Peninsula Dance Theater strike a pose on the beach at Stewart's Cove, Carmel, as they prepare for two concerts Friday, Oct.

23 and Saturday, Oct. 24 at Sunset Theater, Carmel. Tickets are $5 to these evenings of dance, which began at 8 p.m.

Building Industry Assn. here this week

With an eye toward uncovering potential solutions to what it terms "the worst housing conditions in a quarter century," the board of directors of the California Building Industry Association (CBIA) is holding its annual meeting at Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley through tomorrow, Oct. 23.

Noting that less than five percent of California's residents can afford the median priced home in the state based on today's record-high interest rates," CBIA president James P. Lewis of Sacramento said the majority of the association's work during its three-day meeting will deal with how to alleviate the crisis.

Builders from throughout California will congregate at the CBIA meeting for two days of committee meetings on subjects ranging from affordable housing to energy. A full directors' meeting will be held Friday, Oct.

23, during which new CBIA officers for 1982 will be elected.

State Senator Henry Mello (D-Watsonville) was to be special guest speaker during a luncheon on Thursday. Sen. Mello authorized key legislation during 1981 dealing with the California Coastal Commission and its relationship to housing.

Among key decisions expected to emanate from the CBIA directors' meeting are a comprehensive new association housing policy that makes a series of wide-ranging recommendations on how to bring housing back within the reach of buyers and to return stability to the marketplace.

CBIA is the statewide representative of the housing and general contracting industries. Its affiliate members, drawn from six regional builder associations in California, annually build more than 70 percent of the new housing in the state.

Dance concerts Friday, Saturday

The Monterey Peninsula Dance Theater, founded only 16 months ago, will present its seventh and eighth dance concerts Friday and Saturday, Oct. 23 and 24, at Sunset Theater, Carmel. Curtain is at 8 p.m. both nights.

"We're planning on going places with this company," said executive director Michael Bobay. One place the company is not going is broke. Earlier concerts have been successful, said Bobay, and the City of Carmel awarded the non-profit company a $1,000 grant earlier this year.

This weekend's presentations will include a variety of new dance and dance theater styles ranging from contemporary mime to modern ballet. Opera singer Louis Leberherz will provide music for one modern dance as he sings A Tribute to Debussy. Also on the program is a modern trio, Razooli, and a group dance called Sports Edition that depicts games and athletic gestures.

Other pieces in the program are Spanish Fantasy, a contemporary jazz duet, and At the Hop, a nostalgic return to the '50s.

A guest performer will be Pons Maar, a dancer who specializes in physical comedy.

Choreographers for the concerts will be Janet Butler, Gloria Elber, Gaila Cottrell, Mollie O'Neal, and Betsy Ceva.

Tickets for the concerts are $5, and may be purchased at Montgrove Shoes and Dance World, 120 Central Avenue, Pacific Grove. For more information phone 649-6267.

SHE'LL LISTEN VERY NICELY, then go out and do precisely what she wants: Jim Jensen and Florence Larsen star in Jerome Kilty's Dear Liar, a play about George Bernard Shaw and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress who first played Eliza in Shaw's Pygmalion. The play opens at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 23 at Cherry Hall, Guadalupe at Fourth in Carmel.

'Dear Liar' opens Friday at Cherry Hall

Dear Liar, a play about a playwright, starts at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 23 at Cherry Hall, Guadalupe at Fourth St., Carmel. Performances are also scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 24, Oct. 30 and Nov. 1, 6, 7, 13 and 14.

Jerome Kilty's play is a dialogue between two theatrical personages, George Bernard Shaw, the playwright, critic and philosopher, and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the famous actress who originated the role of Eliza in Pygmalion.

It is the relationship between these two eccentric, gifted and intriguing people that forms the basis for Kilty's comic-tragic interchange of will, wit and wisdom. The correspondence between Shaw and Campbell, which formed the basis of the play, lasted for 40 years.

Jim Jensen as Shaw and Florence Larsen as Mrs. Campbell are veterans on Monterey Peninsula stages, having most recently appeared together in Hay Fever at The Wharf Theater.

Dear Liar is presented by

The Cherry Foundation and The Poetic Drama Institute. Tickets are $3. For reservations or information phone 624-7491.

Artist will speak

Artist Len Lasnick will speak to a meeting of the Central Coast Art Association at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 26 in Room 10 at Sunset Center, Carmel. The meeting is free and open to the public.

'Funny Thing' closes this weekend

The decline and fall of the final curtain of The Jamesburg Players' production of A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum happens Sunday, Oct.

25, as the production finishes a two-week run.

First, though, the show goes on five more times at the Hidden Valley Theater, Carmel Valley and Ford

Rds., Carmel Valley. Tonight and Friday, Oct. 23, Forum starts at 8:30 p.m. On Saturday, Oct. 24, there are two shows, a 2 p.m. matinee and an 8:30 evening performance. Sunday's final performance at 8:30 p.m. will be followed by a champagne toga party.

Proceeds from the play go to the Jamesburg School, a small private school in upper Carmel Valley. Tickets are $6 and $8, except for Sunday's champagne performance, which is $15. For more information phone 659-3115.

Live lions at DM Center

African lions, a Siberian tiger and other beasts will perform to the crack of a whip at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. today, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 22-25 at Del Monte Shopping Center.

It's best to let the ringmaster handle the big cats, but there are also lion cubs available for the kids to cuddle and be photographed with. The shows are free; the photograph is $3.50.

Can you be with it without the Review?

Mrs. Parker Where Are You?

In 1914, the artist Armin Hansen arrived on the Monterey Peninsula with a lot more talent than money. He was able to stay because Mrs. Parker, wife of the local fire chief, gave him workspace for the price of one painting/year. Hansen fathered a glorious age of artistic striving and awareness that added greatly to the Peninsula's reputation as a creative community.

Chris and Tom Pemberton are here now. They do museum quality classical bronze sculptural editions, and would like to trade sculpture for part of rent on a suitable quiet studio/living quarters. Can furnish excellent references, great caretakers and mechanical fixers, bright and cheery conversationalists, dedicated craftsmen. Non-smokers & no dogs. If you wish to become a little bit immortal like Mrs. Parker call 372-2573 or 625-3837.

Central Coast Assn. members exhibit works

"Symbiosis" is a biologist's word denoting a mutually beneficial association between two life forms.

In similar fashion, the Central Coast Art Association seems to be in symbiosis with the surrounding community. For several years, Association members have exhibited their paintings in banks, businesses, hospitals and nursing homes throughout the area.

For the artists, the benefit is clear: public recognition, and an occasional sale. For the community, the benefit is just as plain: a brightening up of the bare walls of a bank lobby or a hospital corridor, the occasional uplift of the human spirit.

For the next cycle in this symbiotic relationship, Association artists may take their paintings to either of two locations between Monday, Oct. 26 and Friday, Oct. 30. For business displays, the place is McDermid's Pharmacy, 562 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. For hospital exhibits, the place is Searle Art Supply, 663 Lighthouse Ave., Monterey.

Five paintings were sold through last month's displays. No telling how much enjoyment was produced. For more information phone 372-2615.

CARMEL KNOLLS

This family home is located on a peaceful cul-de-sac, just minutes away from the Barnyard and the new Crossroads shopping centers near the mouth of the valley. Planned and built by the contractor-owner for his growing family a few years ago, it offers space, convenience and quality. The morning sun brings a warm glow through the solar skylights to play on the wood-paneled walls, and the refreshing atrium is a flower lovers' delight. Terrazzo entry, screened patio for outdoor picnics, formal dining room, three bedrooms, two baths and large workshop. Priced at $269,500.

GREAT ASSUMABLE LOANS!

Delightful, spacious rambling Carmel Valley home on one acre of beautifully landscaped grounds. It boasts a swimming pool, Jacuzzi and open barbecue pit, perfect for entertaining. Over 2,300 square feet, three bedrooms, 2½ baths, family room, formal dining room, den and a two-car garage. A serene and lovely setting, with restful views of the mountains, the Carmel River and the Quail Lodge nearby. The property is owned and lived in by imaginative building contractors who are known for their original ideas and fine workmanship. Priced at $294,350. Trades considered.

HERE IS ALL THE CHARM you came to Carmel to find, and all of the conveniences in this 3-bedroom suite. You are close enough to everything to get in a set of tennis in the morning on your way to brunch. $245,000, and being held open this weekend.

CITY TYPES will love this choice — two one-bedroom condominiums in the middle of downtown Carmel. Each has a different aspect, financing is different, but the prices are right and designed to move each quickly — $199,500 and $197,000.

PALO COLORADO CANYON and this building site would be a nice compromise between all-out Big Sur living and a need to commute to work. You can have over an acre, with trees, and the music of Rocky Creek to lull you to sleep for $51,500.

IT'S A NICE PLACE to visit, but I wouldn't want to live there, say some, while others remember Big Sur as they remember their first loves. Near Pfeiffer Beach is a 2-bedroom home on 7 plus acres, with a greenhouse, ample water (something your parents didn't warn you about), and a price that has just been reduced $180,000. Please give us a couple of days to arrange a rendezvous.

Very Nice, Very Nice

HUGH COMSTOCK must have had a lot of child in him — many of his houses make us smile delightedly. The adult in us quickly realizes that his construction techniques were superb. It's the combination of solid building & whimsy that makes us say, "Find me a Comstock!" Here's one, just a few blocks from the Carmel Beach and downtown shopping, with room for the whole family in its 3 bedrooms & 2 baths. Designed for easy care, "Red Geranium" is also being sold completely furnished, and the owners will carry the financing at $375,000.

REAL PRIVACY is possible in this two-bedroom, two-bath home in Carmel Woods. On a 1/4 acre of grounds left natural for privacy and appropriately manicured for civilization, there is room for you. The master bedroom has its own sitting room, the kitchen has been so designed that it is fun to work in and easy to clean and the sun sets over the ocean view. $329,000.

CARMEL LIVING requires a patio, and in this two-bedroom suite home there is easy access from every room to the outside rich in oaks & weathered bricks. Very private, very warm and richly decorated. Now $275,000.

OAKHURST, some few miles north of Yosemite, may be the ultimate getaway. Northeast of Oakhurst, in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada mountains, where deer and mountain lions still play, is a 100-acre parcel with its own 5-acre lake stocked with fish, an A-frame cabin, and owner financing at $395,000.

CONTEMPORARY DESIGNS are for those who prefer the sharpness and clarity of glass, crystal, and long clean lines that lead the eye into space. This 3-bedroom, 2-bath home has those elements, plus room for expansion, in its own forest of oak trees. $219,000.

Bronsons bring young keyboard artists to Carmel

Young Keyboard Artists, a mini-series of three piano recitals, will be presented by Bronson Concerts during the 1981-82 season at Sunset Center Theater, Carmel.

Pianist Ingrid Jacoby will give the opening recital on Saturday, Nov. 21. Two silver medal winners of the Van Cliburn Piano Competition, Panayis Lyras and Santiago Rodriguez, will perform Feb. 5, 1982, and April 23, 1982, respectively.

Miss Jacoby, a 21-year-old pianist from Los Angeles and a recent graduate of the University of Southern California, was one of several Concert Artists Guild winners in 1980 and made her Carnegie Hall debut last winter.

In April Miss Jacoby was one of four piano finalists in the Carmel Music Society's Young California Artist Competition and represented the Music Society at the Fritz Wurzmman memorial concert on June 7 at Sunset Center.

Subscriptions for the mini-series are $20 for adults and $10 for students. Tickets for single recitals are $8 for adults and $4 for students.

Besides representing a discount, the $20 series subscription carries with it a couple of privileges for those who subscribe before Nov. 1. These charter members will be able to sit in reserve seats on the keyboard side of the theater for each recital. They will also be able to drink champagne afterwards, and meet the artist.
